MEIKLEJOHN SCORES ON ONE FOE

Amherst Trustees, at His Request, Drop Allis From Honor List

Amherst, June 19.—The name of Frederick Allis, general secretary of the alumni council of Amherst College, was stricken from the list of those to receive honorary degrees at the Amherst commencement today.

The board of trustees took this action at request of President Alexander Meiklejohn.

Allis is one of the leaders of the anti-Meiklejohn forces.

Ill feeling has existed between the two for more than three years since the time Allis told Meiklejohn that he did not believe it was best for the college for him to remain as its head.

President Meiklehead is known to have gone to George A. Plimpton, president of Ginn and Company, and president of the board of trustees, with the request that the awarding of the degree of master of arts to Allis be "held up for a while."

While there were rumors to the effect that Meiklejohn had been retained by the trustees, that body was in secret session at noon today.

MEIKLEJOHN MEETS TRUSTEE

The full board had President Meiklejohn at the meeting and it is understood that his opponents were arguing as to why they believed it would be for the best interests of the college to oust him.

Sentiment in favor of the president is believed to have gained with the arrival of Walter M. Stewart, professor of economics, now on a

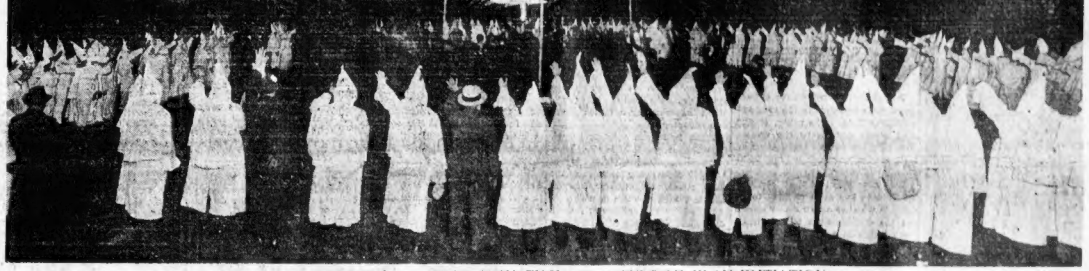
Klansmen of Bay State Take Oath to Support Invisible Empire at Big Open-Air Initiation at Littleton



SCENE AT LITTLETON AT FIRST NEW ENGLAND OUTDOOR KLAN INITIATION.

'HOODED' K.K.K. OATH IN FIELD

Disguised Sentinels on Guard at Weird Outdoor Night Ceremony

Under the glare of the fiery cross, the first outdoor initiation in New England of the Ku Klux Klan was held in an open field at Littleton.

Hooded and shrouded Klansmen to the number of more than a thousand initiated a number of neophytes into the fold, after the fee of $10 had been carefully collected from each.

The proceedings took place on Saturday night, and were carefully guarded.

Aided by the darkness, which auto headlights, fiery crosses and torches only served to emphasize, the Klansmen injected the craftiness of mystery into the initiation.

Figures given out by a Klan official as to the number who participated in the ceremonies differ materially from those furnished by eyewitnesses.

According to the official there were 1,000 Klansmen in attendance, and 700 new members, 100 of them from Boston were initiated.

Five eyewitnesses, not connected

ENGINE IS DITCHED, ONE HURT

Due, in the opinion of railroad men, to a serious defect in the engine, the New Haven train leaving Boston for Mattapan square at 7:24 today jumped the rails near Capen street, injuring the engineer and shaking up several passengers.

The engine turned over on its side, the tender was completely reversed, and the first of three coaches dragged off the irons.

Engineer R. D. Smith of Braintree Highlands, had a narrow escape from death, as he stuck to the cab as the engine rolled over onto its right side. His right arm was badly bruised and cut.

Fireman D. F. Donovan, of Cohas-

SHIP DOCTORS TO HOLD RUM AS MEDICINE IN U. S. WATERS

Washington, June 19.—Ship doctors on a foreign vessel will be given custody, in American waters, of such liquor as he is willing to certify is for "medicinal" purposes.

Under this policy it will be possible for foreign ships to bring in wine rations for their crews, under seal, provided the doctor in charge chooses to regard the intoxicants so carried as "medicinal."

A letter sent by Secretary Mellon to the public health service constitutes a construction of medicinal provisions of the law and makes sure that all foreign laws requiring ships to carry medicinal liquors will be complied with.

By those instructions ship's doctors may make a sworn statement as to the liquors they deem necessary for medicinal purposes and public health officers will not dispute their opinion.

LINER MAJESTIC ARRIVES DRY, BUT 'TWAS A BUSY VOYAGE!

New York, June 19.—The liner Majestic arrived today from Cherbourg bone dry except for thirty-six gallons of brandy, required by British law for emergency medical use.

Although she started with her usual supply of liquor and, in addition, private stocks passengers had ordered in England, the entire supply was gone before the three-mile limit was reached.

"It took the best efforts of the passengers to do it," said one ship's officer.

Avery Hopwood, American playwright, one of the passengers, said he started with 25 quarts of champagne, gin, vermouth and wine. It was all gone when he arrived.

KILLED IN DUEL FOR LOVE; SLAYER CONFESSES AT SCENE

At the end of a trail of blood which led along the dust of Wilmington road into the Burlington woods, State police today confronted Augio Nigolo.

Faced with the scene of the tragedy in which Harry Lancelot, young man of Arlington, came to a horrible death, Nigolo broke down and confessed he had killed Lancelot in a gun duel over the love of

SOVIET JAILS AMERICANS; U. S. SCHOONERS ARE HELD

Nome, Alaska, June 19 (A.P.)—The American trading schooners Silver Wave, Iskum and Belinda are detained at East Cape, Siberia, and their crews are under arrest, on charges of violating trading laws of the Soviet government of Russia, it was learned here.

Rev. N. F. Hoyer, a missionary, who came here by way of East Cape, after a Winter on the Little Diomedes Islands, in Bering Strait, said all craft and crews were being held, until the arrival from the south of a vessel with high Soviet officials.

No violence had been done the ten men or the boats, he said.

With Dr. Hoyer came Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Earnest and six Eskimos, all from Little Diomedes Islands.

BOYS FIRE MATTAPAN BUILDINGS

Two Incendiary Blazes in 24 Hours Laid to Gang of Youths

A youthful band of fire fiends is blamed for two incendiary fires in Mattapan the past twenty-four hours.

Investigation by police has disclosed the existence of a gang of boys whose ambitions appear to be the firing of buildings.

Likening them to the notorious Red Rosters, the "arson trust" of a few years back, which was responsible for a series of lodging house fires, agents of the Fire Prevention Bureau today hinted that the boys may be responsible for other fires.

Witnesses have been found, it is understood, who overheard the boys plotting to apply the torch to oil-soaked waste in the one-story wooden building occupied by the Glover Starch Company, No. 291 River street, Mattapan.

The reflection of flames today aroused neighbors, who summoned the fire department. The finding of waste and other evidence immediately convinced firemen that the blaze was incendiary. Word was sent at once to Captain James J. Walkins of Mattapan police station.

Yesterday there was another incendiary fire which caused $20 damage. Police are withholding all information about this earlier blaze.

$1,500,000 STOLEN BY BANK CASHIER

Wichita, Kan., June 19.—The American State Bank, one of the strongest State banks in Kansas, closed its doors today, following the discovery of the defalcation of $1,500,000 by Philip A. Drumm, cashier, the Wichita Clearing House announced.

The cashier used the bank's funds to invest heavily in oil properties, bank officers said.

Drumm confessed, according to Clearing House officials. The American State Bank is twenty-one years old and has a capital of $150,000. Drumm has been with the institution seventeen years.

The relatively large defalcation was explained in part by the fact that the bank held what was said to be in excess of one million dollars in Wichita school bonds. Drumm is alleged to have used these and other bonds as collateral to float personal loans for investment in oil ventures.

Siki grinned broadly as he listened to the advice from the bench, gave

ARLINGTON YOUTH KILLED IN DUEL WITH CHUM OVER GIRL'S LOVE

YOUNG WOMAN FLEES WITH SLAIN MAN'S BROTHER

Mary Martino of No. 6 Dudley court, Arlington.

State Officers John F. Stokes, Joseph L. Ferrari and Edward F. O'Neill heard the confession of Nigolo.

PRISONER BADLY WOUNDED.

At one end of the blood trail had been found the dead body of Lancelot. A revolver and razor were found beside his body. They bore witness to the fury of the fight.

When the duel was over, Nigolo was discovered dragging himself along on his hands and knees in an attempt to reach medical aid and cheat death. Lancelot had almost prevailed in the duel.

The police have also found another revolver, believed to have been used by Lancelot.

The murder was discovered by Mrs. George Rogers, wife of a dentist living on Wilmington road, who heard shots coming from the shrubbery. After a while she saw Nigolo emerge, his face lacerated. She called her husband, who gave first aid and called the police.

GIRL FLEES WITH BROTHER.

It had been reported at first that Antoinette, sixteen-year-old sister of Mary, had been the cause of the love duel. But Nigolo denied this. He was returned following his confession to the Woburn Memorial Hospital under guard.

An ironic feature of the case, it was discovered today, is the fact that the Martino girl, for whom Lancelot fought to the death, has fled with Tony Lancelot, his brother.

Nigolo's injuries are serious, and he may not recover to stand trial for the murder.

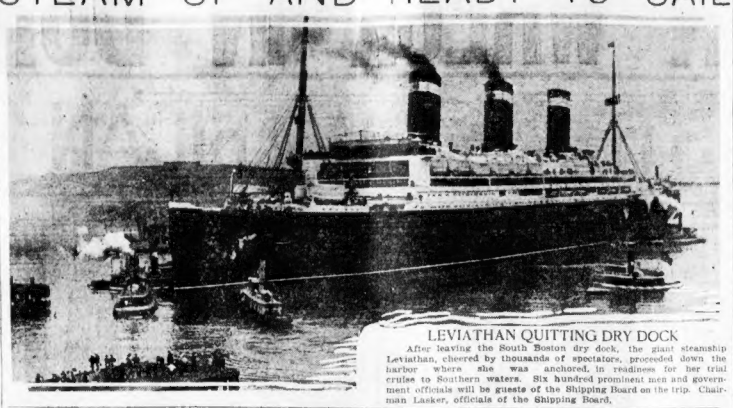
STEAM UP AND READY TO SAIL



LEVIATHAN QUITTING DRY DOCK

After leaving the South Boston dry dock, the giant steamship Leviathan, cheered by thousands of spectators, proceeded down the harbor where she was anchored, in readiness for her trial cruise to Southern waters. Six hundred prominent men and government officials will be guests of the Shipping Board on the trip. Chairman Lasker, officials of the Shipping Board,

LEVIATHAN OFF TODAY ON HER TRIAL TRIP

With the most celebrated passenger list she has probably ever had, the Leviathan today steamed away on her five-day trial trip—a trip which promises to become famous.

At the last moment, it was learned, an order for nop from the Anheuser-Busch company of St. Louis was cancelled. The inference is that the 500 guests of the Shipping Board will have to do without soft drinks.

In addition to Chairman A. D. Lasker, it was learned that the passenger list included the following:

Mayor Patrick R. Griffin of Hoboken; Congressman Sol Bloom; E. F. Albee, head of the Keith Vaudeville Circuit; former Senator William F. Calder of Brooklyn; Representative Martin B. Madden of Chicago; Senator Duncan U. Fletcher of Florida.

Max Epstein, president of the American Tank Car Company; Julius Rosenwald, president of Sears-Roebuck & Co.; Colonel Robert Stewart of the Standard Oil Company; A. G. Becker, banker; Martin C. Ochwab, engineer, and William Wrigley, Jr., chewing gum magnate.

All these are personal friends of Mr. Lasker, from Chicago.

Others aboard were:

R. H. M. Robinson, president of the United American Lines; John W. Martyn, secretary to Secretary of War Weeks; former Senator Burton of Ohio; Congressman Vestal of Louisiana and Tillman Hendricks; E. P. V. Ritter of New York, president of the Merchants & Manufacturers' Exchange; Hiram W. Ricker of Poland Spring; W. R. Butler of New York; J. C. Brown, a noted turfman of Virginia; Director Scobey of the United States mints; George Dorsey and Kemper Cowing of Washington; Frank Hight, manager of the New Willard Hotel in that city; J. Harold Steig of Washington and New York; John Cummings, a statistician in the government service at Washington.

"Bugs" Baer, sporting writer; Robert B. Smith of the Chicago Tribune Washington Bureau; D. J. Carroll of the Boston Transcript; H. M. Holleman of Apex, N. C., a newspaper man; George S. Hudson of the Boston Herald, and George R. Sargent of the Boston American.

While critics of the trial trip have described it as a "million-dollar joy ride," Mr. Lasker, retiring chairman of the U. S. Shipping Board, declared that only $12,000 would be expended on the trip in addition to $100,000 stipulated in the reconditioning contract for making such a trip to demonstrate the fitness of the ship for regular passenger service.

'GIRL' BANDIT IS IDENTIFIED AS SLAYER

Chicago, June 19.—Woman or man, Mrs. Frances Carrick, also known as Fred G. Thompson, was identified today by Mrs. Richard C. Tesmer as the supposed woman bandit who shot and killed her husband in a holdup on June 5.

First supposed to be a man disguised as a woman, the prisoner was declared by Frank Carrick, who with two others, was arrested with the accused, to have lived as his wife for fourteen years.

Known as Mrs. Carrick, the suspect, in the opinion of the police, led a double life as both man and woman, masquerading as one or the other at different times.

The suspect was identified by the smiling expression which Mrs. Tesmer said the bandit assumed until almost the instant of firing the shot that killed her husband. But the prisoner has brown eyes, while the widow said the killer's eyes were blue, but today she said she probably had been mistaken. She positively declared, however, that Mrs. Carrick, or Thompson, was the killer.

Mrs. Frank Carrick, Miss Marie Clark and a man known only as John Doe, also were taken into custody.

When the police raided the flat they found a quantity of woman's apparel, a number of wigs and a loaded revolver. The murder suspect's male name was obtained from an automobile identification card.

The police declared the disclosure of the prisoner's double identity may help clear up a number of robberies and other crimes.

THREE IN RACE TO SUCCEED NELSON

St. Paul, Minn., June 19 (AP)—Governor J. A. O. Preus, Republican; Magnus Johnson, Farmer-Labor, and James A. Carley, Democrat, were nominated in the primary to contest July 16 to succeed the late Knute Nelson, Minnesota's senior United States Senator. Political observers expect the main fight in the final election to be between the Governor and Mr. Johnson. In the recent gubernatorial campaign Preus defeated Johnson by 14,000 votes.

MT. ETNA LAVA PUTS ANOTHER CITY IN PERIL

Catania, Italy, June (A.P.). The eruption of Mount Etna continues unabated.

One stream of lava is now threatening Giarre, a city of about 20,000 inhabitants at the base of the volcano and the population is beginning to leave.

About 50,000 persons have already been made homeless in the area surrounding Etna. The ashes, cinders and stones emitted by the volcano are so thick as to darken the sun, and the crater seems a horrible insatiable monster.

Professor Ponzi of the University of Catania has gone to Etna to ascertain whether a new crater opened on the eastern slope is that which was active in 1879.

Cardinal Francisco Nava, archbishop of Catania, has communicated to the clergy in the stricken area the faithful and paternal interest of the pontiff in the sufferings of the population. He has also received instructions to do all he can to relieve suffering.

Rome, June 19.—Gabriolo Ciarnazza, Italian minister of public works, has gone to the devasted region around Mount Etna to assist in caring for the 30,000 persons who have been made homeless by the mighty mountain's eruption.

Lava is advancing steadily today on Linguaglossa, despatches from Catania state. It is flowing across the railway and has reached a point only a few hundred yards from the town. Castiglione also is menaced.

The violence of the eruption is increasing.

Three little towns, Piedio, Pallamelata and Fero, have been completely wiped out.

Toronto, June 18.—Dellora Angell Norris, niece of the late John W. Gates, "bet-a-million" plunger of a few years ago, is having more trouble. A short time this young lady fell into thirty-eight millions and instead of losing her head, told her friends that "millions mean nothing to me."

Mrs. Norris

To prove it she married a young artist and is now living in a quiet suburb near Chicago.

But about that new trouble. Dellora now has seven more millions to worry about. An aunt died in New York in 1918 and her will has just been probated. According to the terms of the will Dellora and a brother, Edward J. Baker, each receive $7,000,000.

But—money means nothing to Dellora.

FIERY CROSS OF K. K. K. FLARES IN BAY STATE

with the order, declared there were only approximately 700 Klansmen at the ceremony and that altogether about 60 or 70 new members were initiated.

Whatever the actual figures may have been, the initiation took place in the old Country Club grounds about a mile from Littleton, and with the exception of the five persons mentioned, was secret.

PLANS WELL GUARDED.

Even the residents of Littleton were ignorant of what had taken place until some time after the proceedings. Alan Hathaway, Littleton constable, only learned of the details when informed by a Boston American reporter.

Plans had been carefully laid for its advance, and although intimations were made by various Klan officials that a big initiation was to take place, no outsider had the slightest idea of when or where.

Elated by the success of the outdoor meetings, Klan officials declare that a large parade and public initiation will take place at Portland, Me., on July 4.

The Littleton initiation was under the direct supervision of the King Kleagle of the realm of Massachusetts and the Exalted Cyclops, an official of the order from Worcester, presided. A number of Klalifts, Klokards, Kludds, Kladds, Nighthawks and other leaders with equally fantastic titles participated.

Following the actual initiation ceremony an address on "Americanism" was delivered by Dr. Lannan of Boston, who paid his respects to the press, the pulpit and the powers that be. He is said to be a Traveling Kleagle.

SENTINELS ON GUARD

As a part of the plan to prevent any persons not of the elect from reaching the scene of the meeting, guards were placed at intervals of a few hundred yards near all approaches to the farm of a Mr. Drew where the initiation was held.

A good-sized plot of ground overlooking the Mill Pond bordering on the Mohawk Trail had been roped off early in the evening and on a little knoll in the centre of the enclosure the Klansmen erected their altar and the fiery cross.

This cross, which is guaranteed to strike terror into the hearts of all beholders, is usually constructed of pine wood wrapped in oil-soaked cotton and burlap. Smaller crosses composed of acetylene torches were also used.

The first guard was posted at the Littleton depot, less than a mile from the initiation grounds. Arriving Kansmen, who come from all parts of New England and other states, gave the password and were directed properly. Candidates for initiation, identified by white ribbon in the lapels of their coats and a fearful attitude, were also sent on their way by the guard.

They in turn were passed along by two other guards, the third, stationed at the entrance to the enclosure examining all credentials close by. Directions were then given as to the procedure, and instructions as to where automobiles were to be parked.

Other than the cars in which klansmen and candidates rode, only one machine was permitted inside the enclosure. This occupants of this automobile, two men, their wives and a young woman from West Virginia, were allowed to take their machine to a spot within 50 yards of the place where the ceremonies took place, but were unable to overhear any of the ritual.

The klansmen began to arrive early in the afternoon, and devoted the intervening period to ball games and lunch. The lunch was served by women who accompanied them, but who disappeared later.

As soon as the shades of night invested the scene in the proper atmosphere of mystery, the disguises of the Klansmen began to make their appearance.

In a short time the gathering was transformed from a number of ordinary looking American citizens, to white-swathed, ghostly creatures, ominously silent and furtive.

ALONG COMES THE CHIEF.

The guards remained in civilian clothes, but were distinguishable by white handkerchiefs tied around their arms, and by heavy clubs which they carried. One of the outsiders present declared that a guard in his immediate vicinity wore the uniform of a chief petty officer in the United States Navy.

About 8:30 or a little later the chief figure of the ceremony stalked into the "Klavern" or ceremonial ground and made his way to the altar, which was draped with an American flag. On the altar was a Bible opened at the Book of Romans, Chapter 12, and a drawn sword with the point towards the klansmen rested nearby. The inference to be gathered was that the klansmen furthered the ends of Christianity with the sword.

A large American flag floated from a staff a short distance away, near the fiery cross, which was nearly thirty feet high.

When the services opened the candidates, who had taken up positions assigned to them, were conducted to a roped off arena in the "outer den," where the klockard read the questions and received answers. The answers being satisfactory sections of the oath were administered, and the initiates were conducted into the klavern where they were met by the "night hawk" carying a small flaming torch.

The candidates were again questioned and challenged, after which they were escorted to the altar where they formed on three sides and the oath of admission administered.

SPRINKLED THEIR BACKS.

Then came the dedication by the exalted cyclops. He addressed the new klansmen and sprinkled their heads and backs with water, recalling the old army slogan of "a strong back and a weak mind."

Finally he tossed a few drops of water into the air, apparently to purify it, and then all knelt, while a prayer was offered by the Kludd. Then the fiery cross was ignited and in the glade all the klansmen rose and with hand and arm outstretched repeated a pledge of allegiance.

The signal for the commencement of the services was given by the explosion of aerial bombs and the unusual spectacle brought to a halt the occupants of many automobiles passing along the Mohawk trail.

According to information supplied by an official of the klan, there were present klansmen from the following States:

Massachusetts, 5,000; Maine, 1,500; New Hampshire, 300; Vermont, 150; Connecticut 500; New York, 500, together with a sprinkling from Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia and the District of Columbia, who had been in Boston attending the convention of Masonic clubs.

When You Say It. "New Lows," Poor Lambs. Diamonds, Easy to Wear. Forbidden Thought.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1923, Star Co.

THE BEST THING in all Commencement speeches was said by President Lowell of Harvard last Sunday: "A man has not failed in life unless he believes that he has failed, and sometimes not even then."

Write that out, large, and paste it up. Until you believe you have failed there is no failure. Even when you believe it, you may be wrong.

IF YOU gamble in the stock exchange, on the "bull" side, as lambs usually do, there is no good news to give you. "Fresh crop of new lows in narrow market" is how Wall Street reporters tell you the day's sad story.

BUT IF we have excitement in our stock gambling, imagine what they have in Germany. The mark dropped so low yesterday the you could buy 143,000 for a dollar. Many German stocks have gone up 200,000 per cent. Imagine buying a share of New York Central for $100 and selling it for twenty million dollars. It would be exciting even if the money were worth two hundred thousand times less than it used to be.

WITH THE MARK shrinking like the cat in "Alice in Wonderland," the Germans are trying to invent some kind of money that will stay put. They suggest a special gold currency or a "gold account," good everywhere.

Money is strange. You can't invent it, you can't create it, you can't understand it. It is here today, perfectly good, and tomorrow, where is it?

BRITISH DIAMOND MONOPOLISTS, as they sip their sherry, hock, champagne, claret and port (that is the usual order), bless American prohibitionists. The diamond business is booming. Americans, unable to spend money for alcohol, are buying more diamonds than ever.

THAT'S GOOD NEWS for America as well as for British diamond dealers.

To buy diamonds instead of alcohol is progress, even if compulsory. One of these days the high spirited Americans will buy books instead of diamonds, and read them in addition to buying them. That will be greater progress, but it won't come immediately. It's easy to wear a diamond.

MEIKLEJOHN, president of Amherst College, accused of allowing young men to think, annoys respectable and prosperous trustees.

They can testify that they have got along well without ever thinking.

Probably President Meiklejohn will go, but this needn't distress you. The amount of discussion caused by the dismissal of this thinking person will cause the very kind of thought that the trustees fear.

You may say of colleges what the old Frenchman said of travel. "It forms youth when it does not deform it." The trustees of Amherst don't want the kind of college that forms youth.

PERSIA REPORTS powerful earthquakes, raining rocks from mountain tops on villages in the valleys. Of four thousand in five mountain villages, one escaped.

We did not hear much of that earthquake and killing. What difference does it make to us, sons of the Cosmos, what happens in Persia?

The curious thing is that other Persians will build next to the piles of rocks under which the mountain villages are buried and wait for the next earthquake to come.

MT. ETNA is in violent eruption: enormous rocks shoot high in the air with loud explosions. Streams of lava flow in various directions. One "1,000 feet wide threatens the district about Linqua Glossa." An unconfirmed dispatch yesterday afternoon said the town of Linqua Glossa had been buried.

You could dig down around that town and find one city builded below another for one hundred centuries back. We are as determined as the sphinx that build and rebuild when you break their wabs.

JUDGE ORDERS MISTRIAL FOR 'GIRL PONZI'

Springfield, June 19.—The trial of Olga Nazemblo, Springfield's "Girl Ponzi," charged on fourteen counts with larceny of $18,500, came to a sudden halt today when Judge Webster Thayer in Superior Court declared a mistrial and discharged the jury.

The reason for Judge Thayer's action was publication in a Springfield newspaper of a story that attorneys for Miss Nazemblo and the district attorney had a two-hour conference with the presiding judge in an attempt to have the accused woman plead guilty.

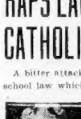
Judge Thayer, in setting the case for trial at the September term of court, said the jurors might be influenced in their decision by reading the story.

Miss Nazemblo was indicted last year after scores of Polish and Lithuanian farmers alleged that she had swindled them out of various amounts. For a time she was held in jail pending bonds of $10,000. She was allowed to go to the Mercy Hospital where she gave birth to a baby and was later arrested and lodged in jail again.

She charged that Harold S. Pratt, a prominent Springfield man, was father of the child.

RAPS LAW AGAINST CATHOLIC SCHOOLS

A bitter attack against the Oregon school law which prohibits parochial and private schools was the basis of the address today of B. Loring Young, Speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, before the senior class of Harvard in Appleton Hall.



B. Loring Young.

Such a law, the Speaker said, tended to violate the rights of the people. Were it to be adopted elsewhere, it would eliminate such institutions as Andover and Exeter. "Theodore Roosevelt was regarded as a pretty fair American," said Young. "Yet he saw fit to send his boys to a private school in Massachusetts. The Oregon school law is aimed at the Catholic church, but it strikes at American freedom."

Mr. Young attacked the K. K. K. and its principles and criticised Mayor Hylan of New York and the Boston School Committee for their campaign to bring about a revision of American histories now being used in the public schools.

ERRING WIFE TELLS OF MURDER

Dramatic Scene in Lawrence Court When Mrs. Meyer Describes Shooting

Lawrence, June 19.—Standing with arms outstretched and eyes flashing, Mrs. Sophie Shureman Meyer, an attractive brunette, cried:

"Shoot me if you want to, but spare my boy."

As though to put a period to her remarks, two shots were fired from a revolver alleged to have been held by Cyrille J. Vandenhecke, one grazing the woman's breast and the other going wild.

This was the dramatic testimony given by Mrs. Meyer in Essex Superior Criminal Court today, at the opening of trial of Vandenhecke, charged with the murder of John Shureman, the woman's first husband.

Shureman, who was 25 years old, was shot and killed on August 9, 1918, in his home at No. 267 Water street, this city, after his wife, who had eloped to Philadelphia with Vandenhecke, had returned to her husband.

Vandenhecke, who fled to London, was arrested in Renfrew, Ontario by City Marshal O'Brien and State Officer Griffin in February of this year. In the interim he is said to have visited Greece and Egypt.

When arrested, Vandenhecke, who has a wife and family in Lawrence, was living with a twenty-year-old girl and their child in Renfrew. The second wife will testify at the trial.

According to District Attorney William G. Clark, Vandenhecke was a Communist and believed in free love. On the witness stand today Mrs. Meyer, who has remarried, admitted intimate relations with Vandenhecke during the absence of her husband at meetings of the Franco-Belgian Club. She said she went to Philadelphia with him because of threats which he made to take her life.

Mrs. Flora Berry of No. 221 West Newton street, Back Bay, has appealed to the police to help find her fifteen-year-old daughter, Evelyn, who has been missing since Saturday night.

According to her mother, Evelyn went riding on a motorcycle with a boy friend. The boy friend, whose name is withheld, declares that he brought Evelyn back about 11:30 o'clock the same evening and left her near her home.

It is believed that she is hiding in a chum's home, fearing a scolding from her mother for staying out so late.

Only the fact that the train was going at slow speed almost fifteen miles an hour prevented a more serious accident.

The engine was crumpled into a heap of junk, blocking the outbound tracks, so that trains were cancelled on the branch for the day.

The wreck occurred between the Canal and second sand dune Mattapan square station at a curve. The track inspector reported there was no defect in the rail.

Greater Bostonians awoke today to another spell of hot weather.

The mercury stood at 86 at six o'clock, but by right had climbed to 72, and at 12 o'clock noon the official thermometer on top of the Federal Building registered 91.

There was every indication that the temperature would go much higher during the day, although the weather man did not look for records to be broken.

Little hope of cooler weather was promised, the official forecast being:

Fair tonight; Wednesday generally fair; continued warm with moderate southwest winds.

In many of the southwestern, east central and Gulf States, excessive heat was reported. In Chicago seven deaths were attributed indirectly to the heat. Numbers of persons were prostrated and thousands were driven to the bathing beaches by a record 91 degree temperature.

Violent thunderstorms in Minnesota and Wisconsin failed to abate the sizzling heat in that section. One man was killed during a thunderstorm at Madison, Wis., and Milwaukee reported one prostration.

At St. Louis, Mo., one man died from heat prostration, the record there for the day being 99 degrees.

The hottest points in the United States were El Paso, Tex., and Phoenix, Ariz., both reporting 96. Parkersburg, W. Va., Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Raleigh, N. C., recorded 90 degrees or more.

WORLD COURT WAY TO PEACE, SAYS HUGHES

Hanover, N. H., June 19.—The Permanent Court of International Justice constitutes a tribunal with standards "that Southern to our highest ideals," Charles E. Hughes said here today, speaking at the alumni gathering in connection with Commencement exercises at Dartmouth College.

"I make bold to say," Mr. Hughes said, "that the United States could today with greater satisfaction submit disputes to which it is a party to this court than to any arbitral tribunal it would be possible to set up."

Mr. Hughes applauded "the increasing interest in foreign peoples and our relations with them," now evident in the United States, but said that if this interest was not to serve "merely to promote the constant endeavors of propagandists or of racial groups, it must have its support in a careful study of history and the understanding of other nations and their conditions which the colleges should provide."

Speaking of the World Court he said:

"It happens that at this time there exists, is functioning, a Permanent Court of International Justice, equipped with a permanent body of judges as well qualified for their task as any judges that could be chosen—men whose character and equipment permits no charge of partiality or disqualification.

"They constitute an independent tribunal that conforms to the standards of our highest courts.

"There is no path to the millennium other than the path of justice, and if we discard the best attainable instrumentalities of justice, to that extent we invite the decisions of the sword.

"The true methods of promoting international accord is to seek to avert the clash of interests by agreement and to have agreements fairly interpreted and carried out."

HARVARD MAN RETURNS, HAD AMNESIA

Xenner Warren Clapp, missing Harvard student, who fled the police and friends a vain chase in leaving to find him, his at last been located at his summer home in Dover, N. H.

The youth, whose home is in Washington, D. C., was a victim of amnesia, according to his own story and that of physicians who examined him. He disappeared May 17, following a swim in the Charles River.

The youth returned quietly to Cambridge last week, visited his former rooming house at No. 81 Oxford street, Cambridge, and then went back to Dover.

From the landlady of the rooming house, Mrs. Jones, the Boston American obtained the following statement:

"Young Mr. Clapp came back last Tuesday. He told me he had waked up at Westfield, Mass., and had come right back to Cambridge. I guess it was overstudy that made him lose his memory.

"He had ten dollars when he went away. His hands were calloused on his return, as if he had been working hard, probably on a farm. He couldn't remember. All he had when he came back was a razor and a toothbrush. He wired his father in Washington, and the next day Mr. Clapp came on and took his boy to their summer home at Dover.

"The report about a woman is all bunk. There was no woman in the case. It was simply a case of amnesia."

HOTEL NEWS GIRL IS TO BE A JUNE BRIDE

Miss Helen Flanagan, known to hundreds of city officials who daily purchase newspapers from her brother's stand at City Hall, and who has had charge of the news stand at the Adams House, is to become a June bride. Today marriage intentions for Miss Flanagan, who lives at No. 458 East Bennington street, East Boston, and Robert Sawyer were taken out. Mr. Sawyer is a civil engineer and lives at No. 74 Westland avenue, Back Bay.

LONG SKIRT IS RULING STYLE

Brilliant Parade Marks Opening, Despite Unfavorable Weather

Ascot, England, June 19. (I.N.S.).—Cloudy skies and drizzling rain today marred the opening of the Ascot Race Meet, the most fashionable turf event in England. The display of fine gowns at Ascot on opening day is traditional. Overshadowing the feminine interest, at least, the outcome of the races.

Despite the unpleasant weather, there was a large turnout and a generous display of finery.

The "Ascot gown" is the pride of every English woman. This year the colors run to pale mauve, yellow and green. The gowns were made with considerable length and fullness, showing that the short skirt has gone out of style. Many of them were heavily panelled with gowns of fluffe ruffled draperies floating out behind.

White serge suits also were popular, most of them being stitched with bright red. White jumper suits, heavily embroidered in red designs, were popular with these suits.

Many of the suits were tailored with box coats, wide lapels cut low with six buttons set close together at the bottom of the lapels.

POETESS TO BE BRIDE OF THE SUN

Los Angeles, June 19. (I.N.S.)—This is another wedding day for Joaquin Miller, daughter of the late "Poet of the Sierras."

Juanita has two marriages and two divorces to her credit, but friends of the poetess of passion of Piedmont predict the third time will remain perma-nently. Miss Miller and the Sun-god were united in matrimony several years ago, but because my vocations were attuned to the Sun's, not because of the "sun spots" in mine."

Accordingly, Miss Miller early today was awaiting the attuning of vibrations—or the rising of the Sun—while perched 500 feet off the ground, in a tower upon the top of one of the big motion picture companies.

She has been in there since last February.

The posters claim that the still little is necessary for meditation and preparation for the ceremony.

"I must remain off the ground so that my soul will be purged of all suggestions of carnality. As you doubtless have heard, this is my first marriage in my second soul cycle. In my former existence I—"

Miss Miller's press agent defines the experience on which she says she has now entered as her second reincarnation and in its no mere man whom you can dispose of with a divorce decree has she paid.

Test cases are now pending in the lower courts, and the department is anxious to get a ruling before the Supreme Court adjourns for the summer.

Dr. Florence Gilman, who has been college physician and chairman of the department of hygiene and physical education, was given the degree of Doctor of Science; and Dwight William Tryon, who retires as professor of art, that of Master of Arts.

For the first time in the history of the college, diplomas were presented to a group selected to study under the newly established special honors system, in which students of outstanding ability are allowed to do concentrated work in one field during their last two years.

Bachelor degrees were conferred on 352 students and twelve took masters' degrees. The commencement address was delivered by Bishop Charles Lewis Slattery of Boston. President Emeritus L. Clark Seelye gave the invocation.

HARVARD CLASS DAYS DRAW THOUSANDS

Thousands of relatives and friends of the Harvard seniors, together with the alumni, assembled today in Cambridge to celebrate class day.

Speaker Benjamin Loring Young of the House will deliver the oration at Appleton Chapel when the seniors gather together for their final religious exercises at Harvard at 9.

Following the chapel meeting the seniors will form in line and march to Sanders Theatre for the Class Day exercises, over which the Rev. Edward Caldwell Moore will preside.

At 2 o'clock the seniors gather behind Holden Chapel for the Tree exercises. Bernard S. Cecil of Stoneham will deliver this speech as well as the Ivy oration at the Stadium.

The last notes of "Fair Harvard" will sound the opening of the confetti battle, in which the thousands assembled on the concrete tiers of the Stadium fort down a shower of multi-colored tissue paper and serpentine streamers upon the sombre-garbed seniors.

In the Yard at 9 o'clock at night the Glee Club will assemble on the steps of Widener Library to give the only open-air concert of the year. Before Lion, under the lantern-hung trees, the seniors and their guests will listen.

Following the dual band concerts, one in each quadrangle of the Yard, the students will depart, leaving the seniors alone for their final rite. Alone they will creep from their senior dormitory room to the bubbling fountains, there to take a midnight plunge.

Scores of Harvard classes will hold their reunions today and tomorrow at the leading clubs and hotels throughout the city.

The duty of graduates to spread the knowledge they have gathered during their training when they enter the world of industry was impressed upon the graduating class of the Babson Institute, Wellesley Hills, during their exercises by Frank B. Gilbreth, consulting engineer, of Montclair, N. J.

"You are expected to give the work the benefit of the opportunity you have had," he said. "You will find that the average practice of executives is far below the best that is already known and proved. Your practice as executives is expected to excel the best extant. The greatest joy in the long run will come to you in the joy of achievement to your fellow man."

2 KISSES A DAY DRIVES WIFE AWAY FROM DOCTOR

New York, June 19.—Alleging that even on their honeymoon her husband, Dr. Max Levy, a Brooklyn physician, wouldn't take the initiative in kissing, but merely returned kisses she gave him, Mrs. Bertha Levy of Brooklyn was granted a separation.

Mrs. Levy testified that on their honeymoon Dr. Levy would not kiss her unless she kissed him first.

"Then he would kiss me back," she said. After the honeymoon, she testified, Dr. Levy kissed her twice a day, when he left the office in the morning and when he returned at night.

"If he had danced with you more and kissed you more things would have been different and you would have been more satisfied, is that correct?" Dr. Levy's attorney pursued.

"Yes, I would have been satisfied," Mrs. Levy answered.

The Health Doctor Says:
Anything soiled by contact with many hands is a menace to health. Therein protection—constant use of a Health Soap which really purifies the skin.

"If they could always be safe from dirt"

Freshly tubbed, the soft flush of slumber glowing against snowy linen—wouldn't it be wonderful if your babies were always as safe—never exposed to the menace of dirt?

Yet tomorrow they will touch and tousle a hundred dangerously dirty things—stray animals, unclean playmates, the fruit of peddlers. Dirty hands carry these dangers to nose, mouth and food. Germ laden street dust will grind into chubby knees and palms.

How can you—the mother—the "Health Doctor"—guard these precious lives?

In just one way—by keeping them clean—scientifically clean.

Lifebuoy Purifies

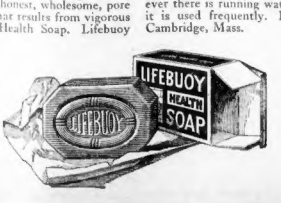
And please don't mistake mere perfumed daintiness for the honest, wholesome, pore cleansing purity that results from vigorous use of Lifebuoy Health Soap. Lifebuoy does more than remove surface grime. Its rich, creamy lather releases a wonderful antiseptic ingredient which is carried down deep into every pore, combating the health foes ever present in dirt.

The pungent odor of Lifebuoy tells you that it is more than soap—that it is a genuine health protector—a skin purifier. The odor vanishes but the protection remains.

Yet Lifebuoy is as pure and bland and skin beautifying as any soap ever made. Its pure oil of palm fruit and cocoanut oil are soothing and healing, especially to a baby's petal skin.

Palm fruit oil is red, so Lifebuoy is red.

For the protection of your children and husband, place a cake of Lifebuoy wherever there is running water—and see that it is used frequently. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.



OLD UNION FAVORS EMPLOYERS

ADMIT CHARGES OF BROCKTON NEW ORGANIZATION

This is the second of four articles on the labor troubles in the shoe industry of Brockton and the Old Colony district. They explain features of the peace agreement which has been in force a quarter of a century and the causes and effects of the present strike.

By CHARLES O. POWER.

Members of Brockton locals of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union admit frankly that Edward H. Talbot, publicity manager for the striking shoe workers, is, in a sense, right in charging that theirs is a manufacturers union.

They go further and say it has been for 25 years and will so long as the contract between employer and employe continues to bring forth beneficial results in such large volume as they have enjoyed in increasing measure as the years rolled by.

Corroborating this sentiment, local officials summed up the peace pact relationship substantially as follows:

"This new union affiliation is seeking to be a manufacturers' union, else why is it clamoring and striking for recognition by the manufacturers, an agreement with the manufacturers, both as to wages and working conditions, as to the settlement of disputes and everything else that enters into the arrangement such as we have with the manufacturers. Is it all right for them to be a manufacturers' union and all wrong for us?

"We are a manufacturers' union in the same sense that the Shoe Manufacturers' Association is a Boot and Shoe Workers' organization.

"We have been friends. We have been interested in each other's success and happiness. The manufacturers have observed their part of the bond and we have respected ours. We have not won all of our disputes, but our winning average is high. The manufacturers have not won in every instance and anyone who says so does not tell the truth.

"This strike is not for the benefit of the workers because their rights are conserved to the utmost by our contracts with the employer. Workers are being misled by those who have political ambitions in union circles and selfish personal interests to promote.

"Nothing could be fairer than the arbitration method which is in vogue. One of the strongest features of our working agreement is the arbitration clause.

"Each side states it grievance to the State Board and each side nominates experts. The experts in turn and the board furnishes each side to the dispute with the facts upon which it bases its findings.

"Dennis E. McCarthy was the business agent for this local for many years, and a good one. He is now the secretary of this union of secessionists. He submitted the case of the Packers and Dressers to the State Board and named an open shop as the place which was paying more wagers to their Dressers and Packers than those of Brockton were receiving.

"It turned out that he was wrong about it. The open shop was paying a lower rate. If the board had been unfair it might have thrown out Mr. McCarthy's case on that score. But it did no such thing. It took other facts into consideration and awarded a finding for an increase in pay.

"Now Mr. McCarthy figures in this trouble in another way. He was a delegate to the national convention of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union which selected five delegates to attend the national convention of the American Federation of Labor at Denver.

"He was ambitious to be one of the delegates to that Denver convention. Five were elected. He was not one of them, although he was a candidate and received a respectable number of votes. One of the delegates could not go and so the vacancy was filled by the appointment of a man from Brockton by the general executive committee.

"Mr. McCarthy and some of his friends thought that he should have been the man selected by the executive committee. Ever since that time there has been more of this talk about the autocratic power of the executive committee and its alleged policy of playing favorites.

"It must be said in fairness to Mr. McCarthy that he denies absolutely that his treatment by the general executive committee had anything to do with his present attitude. He claims to be sincerely interested in the fight for a district organization which will be free from the domination of the international union. Manufacturers say they like him personally for his affable manners and that he quite won their respect for his sharp and persistent efforts in behalf of the workers he represented as business agent.

Mr. McCarthy gives evidence of his thrift and business sense in real estate holdings in the town of Holbrook. A few days ago a woman who occupied a room in one of his houses returned to her job in a shoe factory. She says that, because of that, Mr. McCarthy interviewed her landlady and insisted on her leaving the house.

Mr. McCarthy has refused to comment on this story.

The big point which the strikers make much of and which does seem to afford a real grievance question is the manner in which delegates are selected for the national conventions. They charge that it affords the national officers exclusivit opportunities to manipulate conventions to further their own ends and perpetuate themselves in office.

In other words, they insist that the basis of representation is unfair and that Brockton, with the largest number of members of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union of any city in America, has a very small vote in convention affairs. This feeling is not confined to the strikers, but has been a matter of general complaint for years.

It is readily admitted even by loyal members of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union that this constitutes unjust taxation on the basis of representation.

Accused by Mate

MRS. HORACE A. LYMAN.

Beverly woman whose husband has sued Dr. Frederick P. Keach, Salem dentist, for $25,000, charging alienation of affections. Several months ago Mrs. Lyman sued for divorce.

His automobile rammed twice within a few minutes by a car containing his wife and Dr. Frederick P. Keach, Salem dentist, Horace A. Lyman of Beverly filed an attachment for $25,000 in Salem Superior Court against Keach for alleged alienation of affections.

Several months ago Mrs. Lyman instituted divorce proceedings against Lyman, alleging cruel and abusive treatment. The case is scheduled for trial this week.

According to Lyman, his wife, formerly Marian W. Winthrop, of Lowville, N. Y., was once employed in the office of Dr. Keach.

Last week, he charged, he chanced to be standing on a Beverly street corner when Dr. Keach and Mrs. Lyman drove by in the doctor's automobile.

Lyman followed in his own car, and in driving through Salem, got ahead of the doctor's car and drew up to the side of the street at Salem Willows.

Here, he alleged, Keach's car rammed his car. Lyman jumped to the running board of the doctor's machine, and for the first time during the cause, Lyman said, his wife recognized him.

"Fred, that's my husband," Mrs. Lyman is alleged to have said.

JAIL 'PRESIDENT OF AFRICA' AS 'MENACE'

New York, June 19.—Denounced by the prosecutor as a menace to society, upon his conviction of having fleeced the public through the sale of Black Star Line stock, Marcus Garvey, self-appointed provisional president of Africa, today sat in his cell in the Tombs awaiting sentence Thursday.

There was nothing meek about Garvey when a jury late returned a verdict of guilty against him, but fresh three negro co-defendants.

In a burst of oratory, before he was checked by the court, Garvey expressed his contempt for Assistant United States Attorney Mattuck, ending dramatically:

"You may relent, Marcus Garvey is not to be cowed. You are the meanest—"

At this point Garvey was led away, surrounded with a heavy guard of negroes who thronged the Federal building.

PLANS TO ENROLL ALL ALIENS

Washington, June 19 (I.N.S.).—A proposal for the elimination of undesirables from the tide of new American citizenship, through the compulsory "enrollment" of all aliens, will be carried to the American people for approval this Fall by Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, he told International News Service today.

The secretary proposes a system of registration by which every alien in the country would be kept on the roll until they become citizens. Davis will explain his plan on a nation wide tour.

U. S. SUPREME COURT HEARS WOMAN'S CASE

Washington, June 19.—A case which has attracted wide attention reached the Supreme Court when an appeal was docketed by Charlotte Anita Whitney, whom the court of California found guilty of violating the State criminal syndicalism and sabotage law.

The writ of error attacks the constitutionality of the law, declaring it imposes a restriction of the personal liberty and other rights guaranteed by the fourteenth amendment to the Federal constitution.

PRAYERS MAKE 3 CAMBRIDGE SONS PRIESTS

A mother's prayers and a father's guidance and help led three boys of a family of twelve children living in Cambridge into the priesthood of the Roman Catholic Church.

This happened over a quarter of a century ago. The event was recalled in St. Gregory's Roman Catholic Church, Dorchester Lower Mills, when three brothers, priests, took part in the solemn high mass in observance of the silver jubilee of their priesthood.

ONE IS RECTOR.

These three priests are the Rev. Fr. Gilbert Dolan, O. S. B., Rev. Francis X. Dolan, permanent rector of St. Gregory's Church, and the Rev. Fr. Bertram Dolan, O. S. B.

When one member of the Dolan family, Charles B. Dolan, was asked to give his impression of the turning of these young men of a quarter of a century ago, he replied:

"Why, it was mother who was praying for this. She wanted one or more of her boys to enter the priesthood and then father helped. But above all it was Father Scully of Cambridge who was using his personal touch with every young man in his parish to direct them aright.

FR. SCULLY'S INFLUENCE.

"I think if any man came into contact with Father Scully he would find his life changing for the better.

"Upon my three brothers who are now priests he exerted a deep influence.

"He knew them well and they loved him. He was an ideal priest. Just the type of man who could not speak but that his words were felt. He watched the spiritual growth of every one in his large parish. You wonder how he could do this?

"Yes, I often wonder how he did all this, but he did. We all felt his spiritual power.

"A home made up in the fear of God means something to a child. Going to mass every Sunday and coming under the influence of Father Scully, backed by his personal touch and example, has shaped many a life.

LIVES IN MEMORIES.

"He still lives in our memories though he is dead as far as this world is concerned.

"Mother and father were always bringing us up to think of the best things in life and telling us where to find them. Then Father Scully would come along and give more inspiration to us and now can you wonder that in our family, three of my brothers are in the priesthood. It is a wonder more of us did not get there when we measure the influence we were under."

CHILD BLOWN MILE AWAY BY TORNADO

The nine-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Rudd was blown from a buggy. She was found uninjured a mile and a half away. Whole flocks of poultry have disappeared.

LOCAL-LAF FILM SHOWN NEXT SUNDAY

Last Sunday Boston movie theatres showed the "pacemaker" film which gave the public an idea how the Boston American Local-Laf feature was to be conducted.

Next Sunday the first Local-Laf film will be run in these houses. The film will run to 300 feet, with fifteen jokes selected from among those contributed by readers of the Boston American. The first joke gets a prize of $5, the second $3, the third $2 and the next twelve $1 each.

The same prizes are to be awarded each week thereafter.

In the meantime, the American will continue to print three jokes each day in this column. Each one printed wins a dollar prize. The jokes selected for the Local-Laf film are not printed in this column. You've got to see them in the movies if you want to see them at all.

But the American will announce, from week to week, the names of the winners of the Local-Laf film.

PLANES TO GO AFTER HOOTCH

Congress May Be Asked for $10,000,000 to Down the Traffic Along Coast

Washington, June 19 (I. N. S.).—Mobilization of a big fleet of sea planes to battle rum smugglers off the Atlantic coast will be the government's next step in the war on rum, it was learned officially today.

The President and his cabinet, it is known, favor such an expedient as less expensive and perhaps more effective than other means which have been suggested in recent parleys over the smuggling problem.

The plan may be put into practical operation soon after the new fiscal year begins, July 1. At that time Commissioner Roy A. Haines, head of the Government's rum fighting forces, will have a large lump sum appropriation, upon which to draw for "emergency" purposes.

If this is not sufficient, officials are in favoring of granting every need to equip a powerful air fleet and let Congress later make up any deficiency incurred.

Balked at use of the U. S. navy prohibition officials said the air fleet scheme was the "best bet."

It was at first considered as a means of dealing only with the situation in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New York and New Jersey waters, but as the merits of the scheme were further weighed, it was considered most feasible of any suggestions yet made to drive liquor smugglers off their bases all along the entire Atlantic Coast line.

The unquestioned value of the planes as scouts linked with their great speed would make them the most serviceable type of rum chaser the government could put into play.

Dry leaders in both the House and the Senate who have been consulted are enthusiastic over the plan. Many of them suggested that Congress be urged to make a $10,000,000 appropriation for this purpose alone, exclusive of all other moneys allotted for prohibition enforcement.

GIRL SHOT; SUITOR IS ARRESTED

West Somerville Shooting Reported Accidental in Conflicting Stories

George Sutton, twenty-two years old, of No. 429 Dudley street, Roxbury, was arrested after, it is alleged, he shot and wounded his sweetheart, Miss Kathleen Marie Hawkes, twenty-one years old, of No. 58 Burrell street, Roxbury.

The shooting took place at the home of Sutton's brother, Clement, at No. 27 Winslow avenue, West Somerville, where the couple and the girl's mother, Mrs. Corliss H. Hawkes, were visiting.

BELIEVED ACCIDENT.

The police believe the shooting to have been accidental, but in view of the fact that two versions of the affair were told them, decided to hold Sutton pending further investigation. He was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon and was held in $500 bail for arraignment in Somerville district court.

The girl told the police that she, her mother and Sutton, were visiting at the home of the latter's brother, when the youth came across a revolver among some dishes in one of the rooms. He picked the revolver up and showed it to her, with the words, "Look, Kitty, look at this." The gun was suddenly discharged, the bullet entering her right thigh.

FELL TO FLOOR.

The patrolman who investigated the shooting, the police say, was told that the girl was shot when the revolver fell to the floor from Sutton's hand and exploded.

The dead man is five feet ten inches tall, weighs 200 pounds, wore dark gray pants, black overcoat, tan shoes and black overshoes.

FIND BODY HUDDLED OVER STOVE

Edmund S. Sparrow, Aged 76, Goes Back to His Old Home to Die

The body of Edmund S. Sparrow, West Somerville business man, was found today huddled over a gas stove in his old home at No. 27 Meacham road, West Somerville.

Medical Examiner T. M. Durrell said death was due to gas poisoning, probably accidental. Mr. Sparrow, who was 76 years old, had been in poor health for some time, and his wife, Mrs. Maria D. Sparrow, is confined n a sanitarium.

Last night he left the home of his daughter and son-in-law, Professor and Mrs. Edwin A. Shaw, with whom he lived, at No. 63 College avenue, Somerville.

The three then proceeded to the Sparrow homestead on Meacham Road, which has been unoccupied for some years, although furnished. He leaves one daughter, Mrs. Ethel Shaw, and his widow.

He was born n Orleans, n 1846, and for many years was active in West Somerville business and civic affars. During that period he was a drector and member of the investment committee of the West Somerville Cooperative Bank, a trustee of the Somerville Savings Bank.

Whitman Wife Sobs Out Evidence of Interest in Another Woman

Brockton, June 19.—With tears streaming from her eyes, and between her sobs Mrs. Effie Mildred McDuffy of Whitman, switchboard operator at the Rice & Hutchins Company factory, Rockland, told Judge Chamberlain in Probate Court here that her husband, Charles E. McDuffy, a salesman, wore another woman's garter on his arm for a week and then slept with it beneath his pillow.

The story was in support of Mrs McDuffy's suit for divorce, charging non-support. A decree nisi was allowed and provision for a minor child's support will be ordered.

MARRIED IN WHITMAN.

The couple were married in Whitman, April 19, 1917, and the separation was in August, 1922.

"He contributed nothing toward my support and all I got to eat was from the store we kept in North Middleboro," she testified. "When he finally sold it, I managed to get $50 out of the transaction, while he got the remaining $1,000. Many times he choked me and swore at me. When I asked him to pay bills he had contracted and lift me to pay, he swore at me and struck me.

"We were married in April and the following July he began to receive letters from another woman."

SLAPPED HER FACE.

Coming to episode of the garter, Mrs. McDuffy testified that she found the garter beneath the pillow and when she confronted her husband with the confounding evidence, he slapped her face.

Both parents, Mr. and Mrs. James MacRoberts of Whitman, were witnesses. Mrs. MacRoberts, in relating instances of her son-in-law's infidelity, declared that Effie on one occasion went to work, gave her husband the first money she earned and he went to Brockton and bought a suit with it.

Mona gives a gay party, telling Pat to go to bed, but the latter borrows a sister's dress, steals downstairs and has "a taste of life." Connie goes to a dance at the club and takes too much purch. She is brought home by Fred Browning, with whom she had uneventfully spent the night. Sel Thorpe gives Pat a "real" kiss. Mona dies and Constance receives a call from Cary Scott, her mother's first admirer. Scott is much taken with Pat. A party is planned for the Dangerfield's, to christen the new swimming pool. A thunder storm puts out the lights and the guests go into the water without clothes. Dee modestly hesitates on the balcony and then—the lights came on, revealing her in a blinding glare. One of the bathers is saved from drowning by Cary Scott. Wellhaston, the electrician who turned on the lights, is a friend of Dee's. Pat and Dee discuss the coming wedding.

CHAPTER XIV.

"NO. Of course I don't hate myself. Why should I?" Pat reflected. "I have been ashamed, though—a little. But that's what I felt; that ashamedness afterward. As strongly as I felt the other. Stronger."

Instinctive phychologist enough to know that the rebound is never as powerful as the impact Pat disbelieved this. "Just the same, I think you're taking a big chance marrying Jimmy. Why don't you marry the—the thriller?"

"Don't!" snapped Dee. "You're making it cheap now."

"But why don't you?" persisted the junior.

"I couldn't."

"Is he married already? That would be binding."

"No. I don't know," Dee amended with a startled realization of how little she did know in comparison with what she felt. "He might just as well be. I'll never see him again."

"I would," asserted Pat. "If it was that way with me. If he was the only one."

"Of course he's the only one. Could you feel that with any man? I can't understand that," marvelled Dee.

"Oh, no! Not with just anyone. I'd have to like him. Quite a good deal. It isn't so hard to like you when they make love to you. But I'm off'n that stuff," sighed Pat, turning demure. "There's nothing in it." Again she thought of Mr. Scott and that evening of disastrous revelation at the club. His influence persisted. She had thought much about him as one might think of a benign guardian and had written once to bespeak the continuance of their friendship. "How's Con's affair coming on?" she asked, as a logical mental sequitur.

INTIMIDATION OF PHONE GIRLS CHARGED

The New England Telephone and Telegraph Company is accused of intimidating telephone operators by threats of demotion if they vote in favor of a strike in the ballot to be taken today.

This charge was made by Miss Julia O'Connor, president of the Telephone Operators' Department of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, in a statement to members of the union, in which she called upon union operators to remain loyal to the union.

"The dominant issue is preservation of the union," Miss O'Connor said. "The wage and shorter hours questions are now of secondary consideration.

"We have received reports from all sections in the State that company officials are threatening the girls with demotion if they vote to strike.

"We have appealed to the girls to stand by the union at all costs. We are confident they will do it."

YOUTHS UPSET AND HURT IN STOLEN AUTO

Two Chelsea youths took a stolen $2,000 limousine on a joy ride to Danvers, upset the car, received injuries and were arrested.

The young men gave these names and addresses: George Paul, twenty-one years old, of No. 5 Fifth street, Chelsea, and Morris Gletzner, nineteen years old, of No. 200 Poplar street, Chelsea.

The automobile was stolen in Scollay square. In Danvers the car sideswiped another machine and upset. Paul was cut on his left hand and arm. Gletzner received injuries to his right leg.

The Danvers police were unable to get a satisfactory explanation from the youths as to where they got the car and notified the Boston police. Boston police inspectors brought the couple back and locked them up in City prison. The automobile was slightly damaged.

Why Is the Sea Salt?

FOR ages salts have been washing down into the sea, where they have accumulated. The heat of the sun evaporates the water of the ocean, but this only serves to make the sea more salty, for salts remain.

THE WAYS OF A HUSBAND—By ANN LISLE

A Splendid Sequel to the Famous Story of Wedded Life, "When a Girl Marries"

HOW THE STORY STARTS

Jim and Anne find happiness again on a honeymoon spent in the apartment of Betty Winston, loaned for the occasion. They go to Dreamwold for a Sunday dinner with Jeanie and are met in the grounds by Rosa, who ignores Anne. Rosa advises the discharge of Mabel Storrs to save the big salary. This Anne resents. Evvy helps Anne arrange her apartments and a dinner is given as a housewarming. Phoebe grows hysterical on receipt of Carlotta's wedding invitation. Betty speaks to Anne about Ralph's fondness for the latter.

By Ann Lisle

I'D wondered how Carlotta's marriage to Tony would affect Bertha and Lyons and rejoiced that these two splendid servants had found the courage to confide their story to my friends. Carlotta laughed away Bertha's fears that the past might ever trouble the Lyons family.

"Well," she declaimed, as Bertha fastened the last hook of her dress and bent over her travelling bag, "the Lyons family is pretty safe with us out in the country. The last few years' record of George Lyons strikes me as one hundred per cent. O. K. We've told our friends the Lyonses to cut out thinking about the past. They've been good friends to our bunch ever since we met up. And if any one comes along and calls Lyons No. 12345 why I'll be myself blue in the face for him. So that's all the talk there's ever going to be about that. Selah."

No wonder that Bertha hugged her when the bag was locked and Carlotta signalled that she wanted a last few minutes alone with me. My heart rejoiced that Lyons and his faithful Bertha had found sale haven with two who judged them so kindly and generously.

"You heard me say 'country,' didn't you, Anne?" asked Carlotta as she sat down to adjust hat and veil.

Live at Tony's

"Meaning you're going to live at Tony's place most of the year?" I replied, questioning in turn.

"Meaning we live there all year round. The Sturges house goes on the market. Carlotta Sturges wasn't any too happy. This house hasn't many youthful memories. Carlotta Norreys is a new person. Not a New Woman."

"Meaning?" I inquired.

"Meaning I sell the house and retire to the country. I am holding my interest in the firm, Anne. But I won't be active. Don't have to be! Neal can take care of my end of things. The boy's a wiz. Being a wife is enough for me."

"It was for Susanna May, too." I blurted out to my own astonishment.

Then, abruptly—with one of the old flamboyant gestures that were once so characteristic—Carlotta arose and said:

"I wish Phoebe could have come. I loved Neal for not coming without her. You've given me perfect happiness, Anne. I feel it's your gift. I want you to be happy, too, dear."

And then, with a great sinking of my heart, I realized that to the clear eyes of Carlotta Sturges there was indeed something missing in my marriage. I wondered if some day she would tell me.

I wondered what answer I'd make when that day came.

For loving Jim as I do, with all my heart, I still know we're missing the biggest thing in life. And I feel we can find it—together.

But I pulled myself together and drawing Carlotta into my arms, I said a little prayer before I let her go on to Tony and their new life.

Anne Astonished

A few days after Carlotta's wedding Betty made a suggestion which astonished me.

"Anne, you look awfully done in," she said, employing the English idiom she's unconsciously, I suppose, picked up from Terry. "I could run the shop for a while if you'd take a week of vacation. I think you need it."

"I am a little tired," I replied. "But I hate to confess it. It sounds so weak-sisterish to be tired all the time."

"All the time!" mocked Betty good humoredly. "You run the affairs of your house, of this business, of your social world, of everyone you know, and then, after you've fairy-godmothered all over the place, you wonder why you haven't any energy left for one Anne Harrison."

Dreaming

DRAWN BY POPINI

6-26 Copyright, 1923, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

CURIOUS, indeed, are the visions which sometimes come in dreams. Clever men and wise women may read in dreams the secrets of yearning souls. They may banish fears and restore health by these "readings." But is there any mystery in the visions that come to those who are in love?

There's the man who dreams that kindly sprites whisk him into the presence of The Girl. And there's the girl who dreams that her Prince Charming flashes through the air—over valleys, mountains and tumbling green seas—to clasp her to his heart and make all her dreams come true.

Wherein lies the magic of dreaming? Doesn't it reside in that wisdom which chooses to dream about only those things that can come true and which are right and fine and altogether to be desired when they become glorious reality?—Popini.

THE HE MAN

SHE FLEW WITH HIM TO THE JUNGLE

By George Agnew Chamberlain

THAT was while she still had strength. At such moments M'sungo felt himself on the verge of a mad act. He would leap to his feet and stride up and down, his fists clenched at his sides, his face white, his mind caught in a whirl of torturing doubt. The old problem of values seized upon his brain and tormented it. What was worth while? How much could one give out in agony for life and still hope to pay the debt to self? But when through the hours she grew weaker and weaker, that was a thousand times worse. The light went altogether from her eyes yet they lived and living accused him in silence of horrible things—of things so terrible that they lurked in that deep shadow of the mind which is beyond the ken of words.

Seen Men Die

He had nursed people before, he had seen men die, casual friends and once a faithful servant, but nothing like this had ever before come to him. It was as if this girl, this stranger, were flesh of his own flesh, body of his body. He felt in himself the torturing reflection of each of her torments as though transcending the barrier of sex, he had stolen a memory of motherhood and travail.

He was giving her the treatment for pernicious malaria. Together with every other white man who has served apprenticeship to Africa he had an extraordinary store of rough and ready medical knowledge. To such men only six drugs are essential, all others being classed as furbelows of the pampered sick room, and with these they work as with elementals. Kill or cure is their motto, the saving idea being that if the patient can't stand punishment, he would go under in any case.

The trouble with M'sungo was that he knew so well his shortcomings. Each time he measured out a dose, his hand trembled as though it had never gambled before and each time he cursed his ignorance and in the same breath prayed for guidance; but, nevertheless, he fought steadfastly against the continual pressure of a desire to ease up, to be fatally merciful.

On these rare occasions when Andrea's spasms conquered his reluctance to use the needle he would watch her until the spasm stilled her and then fall into his chair and to sleep. "I am here," he would say even as his lids closed. "Never forget I'm here for you. Touch me or speak to me and I'll awake." It was true. In spite of his long vigil he kept deep slumber at a distance by an effort of the will like a man who sets a clock in his mind and trusts to his subconscious self to call him at the hour marked.

The afternoon of the second day found Andrea unusually subdued and still but he was not deceived. He looked at her eyes and saw that their pupils still appeared convex and glassy like the eyes of a fish. They stared at him with an immeasurable gravity. When her lips parted, he shrank even before she spoke.

"I wish you would go away," she said quietly. "I don't like to look at you; I don't wish you to look at me. I will be afraid if I never see you again. There is no one in the world that I wish ever to see again. Please send me that nigger, Bathtub. If I must have some one I would rather have him."

Squat on the Floor

He arose, called Bathtub and made him squat on the floor where her eyes could quickly find him; then he went to the door behind her and stood for a long time looking out across the glaring crawl. The rays of the sun descended on that beaten space with an almost audible contact. The leaves of the acacias were shriveled, not a woman or a child was visible and even the fowls crowded close in the shadows of the eaves.

He took a step out and looked up into the bowl of the sky. His tired eyes searched it from horizon to zenith and back to the hot level of the earth. It was empty. Its hollow infinity pressed down upon his breast with a measureless weight. He had come out for a barley, remonstrance on his lips, but he had forgotten that in the tropics God walks only at night.

He turned, went back to his post and sat down, dismissing Bathtub with a nod. Andrea's eyes were still fixed in a lightless stare. Presently she began to speak. "You bring me here, you let me fall ill, you shame my body. You are like the men that strap down little slaves and open them. You are like that. You look at the stars, at my heart, at my bare lungs and all the unnamable beastly things inside of me. You make me alone with a nigger—when I'm torn open. I don't hate you. You are nothing."

Her voice went on for a long time. He dropped his face in his hands but he did not try to stop his ears. They listened to all she said, they told him she was suffering as he had known no one ever to suffer before. Her spirit spoke from beyond pain. In that hour he learned a great truth. Pain is a wall, a barrier. So far and no farther can flesh go and still hold to the memories, the fears and affections of everyday life.

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

A knows a young man very well, but this young man has never taken her out. Is it proper for A to invite this man to a public affair? B says the young man should have invited A first.

An Appreciative Reader.

FRIENDLINESS and hospitality need not be such a debit-and-credit, give-and-take proposition. Tell A to carry out her generous inclination and invite the young man to the party. Tell B not to be so particular about making his reckonings balance!

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Two young men called at my home. I am not engaged to either. I live in a tenement house, and when one of the young men was leaving, I saw him to the top of the stairs. Was that good form?

MISS M. G. K.

I AM sure that you gave to your guest an added impression of your friendliness and hospitality by accompanying him a little farther on his way out than is required by "strict" form. Nothing indicates a hostess' hospitality so completely as the way she speeds the parting guests. A door closed a half a minute too soon or a leave-taking that does not register graciousness takes away all the joy of the call. In the houses of "smart" society it is bad form to close the door before the visitor has reached the sidewalk.

WHO SAID IT AND WHERE

"Rich soils are often to be weeded."

Care is necessary at all times, according to Bacon, who used the passage quoted above, of the mind, in a letter to the celebrated jurist, Sir William Coke.

"Account no man happy before his death."

Croesus, King of Lydia (560-546 B. C.), spoke when Solon, the Greek lawmaker, to whom he had shown his treasures, told him he must be the happiest man in the world.

"O liberty! How many crimes are committed in thy name?"

This famous remark was made by Madame Roland (1754-1793).

"To join the useful and the pleasant."

Horace in his famous treatise on the "Art of Poetry," tells us that he is sure to "win popular approval who joins the useful with the pleasant."

"To appeal from Philip drunk to Philip sober."

Valerius Maximus, who lived in the first century, tells in one of his stories how the ministers of the Greek King Philip used in this way to keep their sovereign from trouble.

"The best of all ways
To lengthen our days
Is to steal a few hours from the night."

Thomas Moore did not make this discovery. He merely incorporated it in his poem "The Young May Moon."

What's Wrong Here?

VANISHING SIGHTS

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

THERE are two landscape features, characteristic of American scenery, in the older parts of our country, that are rapidly disappearing, to the great regret of all lovers of the picturesque—rail fences and covered wooden bridges. I would drive miles out of my way to see a good specimen of either, and I guess I would drive a long way, too, to find either one or the other. Yet in my boyhood's days, in the Mohawk-Schoharie country, I was in daily familiarity with rail fences, while we could not go to town without passing under the delightful, swallow-haunted roofs of covered wooden bridges, whose worn planks thundered beneath the horses' hoofs with sounds that were solemnly impressive in childhood's ears.

What an experience of mingled terror, wonder and delight it was when caught by a Summer thunder storm, to take refuge in one of these bridges. Forked lightning never seemed so near and blinding bright, or thunder peals so terrific, as when seen and heard there, with rain roaring on the shingled roof, and the wind driving through the openings, while the frightened horses jumped on the resounding floor and crowded against one another at every rattling discharge.

Even a country boy felt that it was romantic. It took many minutes to drive across the long bridges, and the pigeon-holes in their brown, weather sides threw fascinating shafts of misty golden sunlight at regular intervals across the gloom. The automobilist, shooting in three or four seconds through one of the few such bridges now remaining, has not time to feel its charm. "G-r-a-n-r-a-r-r-an-upp!" and it is behind him, a fast receding, square, dark hole.

If possible, the rail fence made a stronger appeal to the imagination than did the covered bridge. There was more life and animation around it, especially when it bordered a wood, while its long sloping and crossing uprights, straddled a low stone wall, that rose from a base for the fence. The innumerable holes and crevices in such walls sheltered chipmunks, weasels, and other darting creatures usually seen only by glimpses, and more fascinating to the boyish mind in proportion to their speed.

There was another type of rail fence, which crossed the farmer's fields in the open and which, having no stone wall to keep it straight, went zig-zag in order to give itself stability. These were runways for squirrels when crossing between wooded lots, or from a forest border to some group of nut-trees in a neighboring field. Both types of fences made good shooting grounds in the autumn.

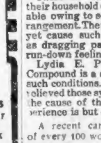
I am now doing my own washing, which I haven't done for several years, and can walk long distances without dragging pains and weak feelings. The Vegetable Compound is fine, and I never forget to say a good word for it to other women when they say they need something."—Mrs. G. W. HALL, 539 Hazel Avenue, Lima, Ohio.



There are many women who find their household duties almost unbearable owing to some weakness or derangement. The trouble may be slight, yet cause such annoying symptoms as dragging pains, weakness and a run-down feeling.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine for such conditions. It has in many cases relieved those symptoms by removing the cause of them. Mrs. Hall's experience is but one of many.

A recent canvass reports 98 out of every 100 women are benefited by

FLAMING YOUTH By WARNER FABIAN

The Great Reform Novel of the Year, Baring Innermost Secrets of Luxury-Loving Class

"With Cary Scott? He's away. Back in Paris for a couple of months' stay."

"Do you like him, Dee?"

"Yes. A lot."

"He isn't the man, is he?" demanded Pat sharply.

Dee's laughter was refutation enough. "Catch me poaching Connie's game. It couldn't be done."

"Oh, I don't know," replied the other airily. "Mr. Scott's got too much brains for old Con. Do you think she's crazy over him?"

"I think she misses him."

"When's he coming back?"

"In time for the wedding, anyway."

"The wedding! When is it, Dee?"

"Second week in July," said Dee without enthusiasm.

"So soon! Am I going to be a bridesmaid?"

"No."

"O-h-h-h-h!" wailed Pat. "Pig!"

"You're to be maid of honor."

Pat gave her little, hoarse crow of ecstasy. "How darling of you! That's too divine! Are you going to give me my frock?"

Dee nodded. They talked clothes, absorbedly. When she got up to go Pat leaned over and kissed her sister, the first time since they were children that she had done this except as a formality of family life.

"I almost wish you weren't going to do it, though, Dee," she murmured.

"I don't," said Dee resolutely.

"If I could find it in my heart, dearest one, to blame you for anything it would be for sending little Pat to a finishing school." (So wrote Robert Cosselmuth to Mona Pentrax.) "With the best of intentions they wreck a mind as thoroughly as house-wreckers gut a building. It was your choice and I dare not change it. Even if I could persuade Tolph to take her out of that environment and send her to Bryn Mawr or Vassar or Smith, which is where she ought to be, she would rebel. She has a contempt for 'those rah-rah girls,' a prejudice bred of the shallow and self-sufficient snobbery which is the basic lesson of her scholastic experience. To be sure, they have finished her in the outward attributes of good form, but most of that is a natural heritage which any daughter of yours would have. She can be, when on exhibition, the most impeccable little creature, sparkling, and easy and natural and charmingly deferential toward the older people with whom she comes in contact—when she chooses. For the most part she elects to be calmly careless, slovenly of speech and manner, or lightly impudent. To have good breeding at call, but not to waste it on most people—that is the cachet of her set.

"But these are surface matters. It is the inner woman—yes, beloved—for little Pat is coming to conscious and dynamic womanhood—which concerns me now and would concern you could you be here. Appalls me, too. But perhaps that is because my standards are the clumsy man-standards. What is she going to get out of life for herself? What does all this meaningless preparation, aside from the polishing process, look to? If hers were just a stupid, satisfied mind, a pattern intellect like Constance's, I would not so much matter. Or if she had the self-discipline and control which Dee's athletics have given her, I should be less troubled. But Pat's is a strange little mind; hungry, keen and unconformist. It really craves food, and it is having its appetite blunted by sweets and drugs. Is there nothing that I can do? I hear you ask it. Yes, now that she is at home I can train her a little, but not rigorously, for that mind is too soft and pampered to set itself seriously to any real task. In the days of her childish gluttony I used to drive her into a rage by mocking her for her pimples and finally he exercising her vanity got her to adopt a reasonable diet. The outer pimples are gone. But if one could see her mind. It would be found pustulous with acne. And there are, I do little against the damnable influence of the school which has taught her that a hard trained, clean blooded mind is not necessary. The other girls do not go in for it. Why be a bluestocking? She is so easily a leader in the school, and, as she boasts, puts it over the teachers in any way she pleases. In the days before she became aware of herself it used to be food to get her to brush her teeth. Today I presume that her worthy preceptress would expel her if she did not use the latest dentifrice twice a day. But there are quite willing to let her mind become overlaid with foul scum for want of systematic brushing up.

"Dynamite for that institution and all like it. Nothing else would serve. With all our institutions—Mona, your life of excitement, your curse down philosophy of life (Pat, who has now taken Latin, does not know what carpe diem signifies), your eagerness for immediate satisfaction—of the most insidious, because unconscious, kind, you never let your brain become softened and untrained and fat. The higher intensity and lust are much a part of the embellishment of life to you as were flowers or games, music or friends. What inner friends will little Pat have? Not literature. Shakespeare she knew because she must; the school course requires it. But he is a task, not a delight. Thackeray is slow and Dickens is a bore. Poetry is a mechanical exercise. I doubt whether a single really beautiful line of Shelley or Keats or Coleridge remains in her memory, though she can chant R. L. Service and Walt Mason, assiduous she has read on the elucidating mists of the functionalness of his finger, and the taut, humanly, Balzac means to her the 'Contes Drolatiques,' also 'Ivanhoe' pursued. Then, and not Wells are vague names something to say, until she is older. But O. Henry she definitely denies a classic and is quite familiar with his cleverness performances; proud of it, too, as evidencing an up-to-date erudition. And for 'Tono Bungay' of the day, she is keen on them, particularly if they happen to be some such school and fame achievement of an industrialist Arab. Any book reason of under the breath has for her the connotation of a race, she must absorb it first and then look knowingly and dismiss when it is mentioned. The age of sex, Mona. Her standards of carnal reading are of like degree; she considers 'Tono Bungay' an important example and 'Ogle Pan' a symposium of pure intellect.

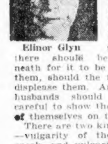
Intimately Revealing the Life of a Modern and Precocious Society Flapper

LOVE AND MARRIAGE

By ELINOR GLYN

ADVICE TO NEWLYWEDS

IN this article I am still going to talk principally to the husbands, though some of the remarks now apply equally to both bride and bridegroom. Women are very much influenced at first impressions, and impressed by outside appearances, so that it always takes time if there should be gold underneath for it to be appreciated by them, should the first impression displease them. And so all young husbands should be extremely careful to show the very best side of themselves on the honeymoon.



Elinor Glyn

There are two kinds of vulgarity—vulgarity of the body, so to speak, and vulgarity of the soul. Vulgarity of the body is caused by want of training, home environment, example and custom. Vulgarity of the soul is innate bad taste, which can show itself through the greatest physical refinement, and is infinitely more wounding than the former.

For happiness in marriage, both husband and wife should make an examination of their own characters; with ruthless crushing of vanity discover their own faults, and then use common sense in deciding which of them are likely to hurt the mate. If men had pluck enough to ask themselves, "Have I a vulgar soul?" many of them would be horrified to have to reply to themselves, "Yes, I have." They would suddenly remember many little things which they had said, and inferred, to their wives, which must have utterly disillusioned them.

And this applies to women also. Vulgarity of soul imputes small and mean motives to others, not based upon knowledge of their characters, which in some cases would then deserve the imputation, but in a general way often before any knowledge is possible, because in the same circumstances they would act in the small and mean way, and so gauge others by themselves.

Don't rush into marriage too young. Calculate the chances of happiness as it will be as much common sense as you would calculate your chances of getting across a river safely if you plunged in not knowing the currents!

TELL THESE AT DINNER

The newly-married pair were in front of the fire.

"Dearest," said the young bride, "have you any secrets to hide from your wifey?"

"None, my pet," replied hubby proudly.

"Then I, too, will have none from you," she said in heroic tones.

"What, have you a secret?" he asked in a startled voice.

"Only one," she said firmly and slowly, "and I am going to tell it to you."

"Go on," he muttered hoarsely. "For some weeks I have had a secret longing for a fur coat for a birthday present."

Father was very long-suffering and patient, but sometimes even his nerves gave way under the continual questioning of his seven-year-old son.

From the time he woke up in the morning to the time when he went to bed, he was pestered with questions upon every topic under the sun.

"Dad," said the young hopeful, one evening just as his father had settled down comfortably with his pipe and book, "dad, it says here 'Back to the dust.' Am I made of dust?"

"I think not, Thomas," answered the weary parent. "If you were you'd dry up now and then."

Mother—"Did you tell Doris she could not go to the party?"

Father—"I did."

"Did you tell her that we considered it not a fit place for our daughter to be seen?"

"Yes."

"You know it is not enough merely to refuse to grant a young person's request. You should always give your reasons. I trust you explained this to her?"

"I did."

"And warned her of the folly of late hours, the hurt of gossiping tongues; in short, you did your best to make her realize that it is for her good that we are denying her this bit of pleasure?"

"I did all that."

"And she is now satisfied to forego this needless amusement and to remain quietly at home with us?"

"She is not."

"What does she say?"

"Oh, heavens, you're so far behind the times, you don't know anything!" repeated father sadly.

FURNITURE IN HOME

—By Marian Moore—

IT isn't necessary to "hire a hall" just to accommodate a grandfather's clock. If the home is hall-less, put your Colonial clock in the dining room, where its companionable tick-tock furnishes music for the meals.

Notice how nicely the tall walnut clock harmonizes with the Jacobean dining suite in this room. Yes, there is a suite, but only a few pieces got in the picture. Even the tea cart has the Jacobean design to make it attractive, and the drop leaf at the side adds many inches to its serving space. The spacious buffet, with its two compartments and two sliding trays, has the triad arrangement, consisting of a large silver fruit dish flanked by silver candlesticks holding vermilion candles.

FOXY GRANDPA STORY

WHY MR. WEASEL FINALLY MOVED

"NO, I won't shoot that little weasel," I said firmly to Bunny and Bobby one day when they told me that the weasel had frightened our chickens again.

"I know he's a destructive little fellow, but I'd hate to feel responsible for making Mrs. Weasel a widow and burdening her with the responsibility of bringing up her large family alone. And I'll tell you another thing, boys, I must admit I am compelled to admire Mr. Weasel. He's such a fiery little fellow and so fearless! Just come out with me now into the alfalfa patch and watch him, when we get near his hole!

We entered the alfalfa patch and went quietly up to the door of the weasel house. We had no sooner reached the entrance than out he came. He really looked like a big fat rat. There he crouched as brave as a lion and as defiant as a tiger. He honestly made a face at us, and showed his teeth as if he were going to jump at us and eat us up.

"Look, Foxy Grandpa! His eyes are glaring red, he's mad!"

I shook my finger at him and started back to the house chuckling.

"That alfalfa patch isn't doing very well boys. I think I'll have to start irrigating it."

The more I thought about irrigating, the wiser I thought it was to start at once.

So I engaged some men and they dug the ditches in the alfalfa and laid the water-pipes.

On several occasions as I was walking around superintending the work I stopped at the door of Mr. Weasel's house to see if he had become frightened and taken his family away. But no indeed! Each time I stopped, Mr. Weasel would come to the door and scowl at me more fiercely than ever.

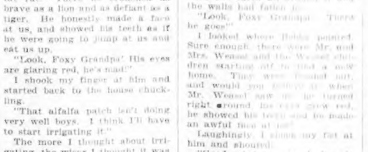
"What a temper he has," I thought.

The day arrived when the work was completed and we turned on the water.

With great pride I watched the rivulets flow through the alfalfa patch, and I thought that soon my alfalfa would be higher and thicker than it ever had been before.

Bobby, who was standing near me, suddenly exclaimed:

"Foxy Grandpa, I wonder what Mr. Weasel will do now. Surely he can't keep his family in such a damp home!"



"Let's go and see him," I answered.

We went over to Mr. Weasel's house and there wasn't a drop there left. The water had evidently run the earth all around it and the walls had fallen in.

"Look, Foxy Grandpa. There he goes!"

I looked where Bobby pointed. Sure enough there were Mr. and Mrs. Weasel and the whole children starting off to find a new home. They were headed northward. Would you believe it, when Mr. Weasel saw me he turned right around, his eyes grew red, he showed his teeth and he made an awful face at me.

Laughingly I shook my fist at him and shouted:

"Good riddance to bad rubbish, you destructive little fellow!

Butterfly Salad

Cut one ring of canned sliced pineapple in half and lay these two semi-circles on a rather large flat lettuce leaf, so that the round parts of the pineapple allow room for the body of the butterfly. A white walnut meat makes heads and two narrow strips of either red peppers or canned pimento on either side of and will suggest the antennae. Two similar strips of red pepper are put below wings to finish body. Lay on the wings are decorated with a dab of mayonnaise dressing on either wing.

Remember the Time—

By Jack Casey

EVERY amateur entertainment or church show was a failure unless they had a couple small girls dressed as sailors who danced the hornpipe. An' they was always the hit of the show an' everybody applauded.

Tommy Lyons was the best singer in town and used to sing at all the church suppers and debates, an' he wore a deep bang that hung over one eye, and whenever he got down into low registers in singing "Asleep in the Deep" the bang used to flop an' wiggle and annoy you dreadfully.

Ike Garsides used to sing "Who Threw the Overalls in Mrs. Murphy's Chowder?" an' knock 'em clean off the benches he was so funny. An' you often wondered why he didn't go on the stage instead of drivin' a laundry wagon.

The Sunday papers gave away colored pictures, mostly reproductions of famous paintings, an' they came in series and you used to ask yer Pa to be sure an' get the particular paper what had the series you liked. An' you wanted to carry Sunday papers and stand outside churches like the Quinn boys did because yer made two cents apiece on Sunday papers and only three cents a whole week on the local daily.

Yer wore corduroy short pants and liked 'em because they wore like iron an' they came in two colors a sort of purplish and molasses color. Yer sisters saved up and got a croquet set and fixed it on the lawn an you laft at 'em and called 'em sissys, but when they wasn't around you sneaked up on the game and played it yerself or satisfied the curiosity of yer boy friends by lettin' them in on it till they got rough an' started whanging the wooden balls, when one day one of 'em split one right in two an' you got a lickin.

Clothes poles were kept in the corner of the yard against the picket fence and yer Ma had a clotheshorse to dry things on rainy days in the cellar. On Fridays yer had fish balls with lots of tipple sauce and an apple pie and' after runnin' from school you was always ravenous. Yer used to make a lassoo out of a piece of clothes line an' an Indian an' start a fire by reflectin' the sun off a pocket mirror onto dry leaves.

VILLA TO BATTLE GENARO IN NEXT CHAMPIONSHIP BOUT

B. C. Plans to Take Deciding Game From H. C.

NEW GLORY AWAITS EAGLES

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

The deciding game of the Boston College-Holy Cross series will be played at Fitton Field, Worcester, Saturday afternoon. Frank McCrehan, who defeated Owen Carroll on the holiday, will again pitch for the Eagle while it is very probable that Owen Carroll will be given a chance to redeem himself in the third game.

Boston's win was an upset as the Purple nine were picked to win. The Eagle batters knew that they could hit Carroll, who is rated as the best pitcher in the ranks, and they went to Worcester confident of annexing the game.

The Eagle team showed a fine improvement as form since the first game. The infield worked smoothly although five errors were made. One error, by Hayes, allowed Holy Cross to make its only run. Two others moved, charged to Hayes, gave the Purple nine.

Boston's outfield played perfect in the field, and Wes Dunn, Comerford did well at bat. Dunn hit for a three-bagger, a double and two singles in three times at bat.

Now that Boston has taken the feeling the Black Cross nine pitching ace in six hits the first game of the series next Saturday.

The box score:

Frank McCrehan, who pitched two years McCrehan has been honor pupil at Boston College show real baseball ability. He is the heaviest man on the team, weighing 200 pounds, and against teams that were built for the heavy hitting kinds.

McCREHAN HOLDS HOLY CROSS SLUGGERS TO TWO HITS.

The score tells the story of the game. Tommy Phillips, Boston's second baseman, was responsible for seven of the Purple batters. He had perfect control, passing only one batter, never allowed the foe to reach first base, and helped his team mates to unnerve him.

TOMMY PHILLIPS EARNED HIS SHARE OF GLORY.

There was plenty of action in the game and Tommy Phillips, Boston's second baseman, was responsible for seven of the Purple batters. He had perfect control, passing only one batter, never allowed the foe to reach first base, and helped his team mates to unnerve him.

DARLING AND FOLEY ALSO IN THE HERO CLASS.

There were others in the game who were deserving of praise. Foley and Darling, who batted in three runs.

There was "Sonny" Hayes who made six assists. True he made three errors, but none of them were fatal. A man who breaks up a double play is entitled to a few errors.

Ryan Prendergast, for a few innings, relieved Carroll and was out to win the game. He caught the ball well and showed the umpire did not err when he called balls and strikes.

ZEV WILL HAVE A REAL RIVAL IN AQUEDUCT CLASSIC

DUNLIN IS THE HORSE HE FEARS

By TASKER OGLE

New York, June 18—Aqueduct racing's bidder for Zev's crown is Dunlin a $45,000 son of Fair Play and Dona Rosa in the stable of J. S. Cosden.

Dunlin, which was bred by August Belmont, came to racing last season in the stable of John E. Madden, Cosden bought Dunlin for Madden at Yonkers last July after seeing him run that black and white bucked whirlwind, Cyclops, to a head. Cosden won Dunlin out at Saratoga when the Fair Play colt defeated Gushawk, Zev and nine of the other first class youngsters in a renewal of the $55,000 Hopeful Stakes.

Dunlin was a much talked of Kentucky Derby and Preakness candidate in Maryland in the spring but he was not seen here, although a favorite for the Saratoga Handicap at one of three races. The choice of William Garth, the Goldsmith trainer, was always Martingale.

Martingale, through out March and April, trained most satisfactorily than Dunlin. Dunlin became unusual and was something of a failure until he defeated Rip L. Cindy, Bluement, Cyclops and Carol Saraday at Aqueduct in a renewal of the Carlton.

It was because of Dunlin's failure in race to the promise of his 3 year old form that Mr. Cosden paid $50,000 to James E. Johnson last week for Bluement. It was one of the hottest of the rumors that on the occasion of their first appearance in a race under the Cosden's silks Dunlin beat Bluement. Bluement met Dunlin four times last season and finished in front of him three times. But Bluement will have to go some to beat the Dunlin that leaped home yesterday.

Because of this race of Dunlin's, Mr. Cosden announced that Dunlin would go west with Zev toward the end of June to start in a renewal of the Latonia Derby June 30.

Zev did not have a great deal to do last summer. The three-year-old champion of the season's early part failed to show Dunlin weight for age, but now that Mr. Belmont sold Dunlin to John Madden two seasons back for $40,000 he (Dunlin) was a wonderful starting Dunlin colt. It was a case of his age, the setback of the Jockey Club handicap and Shoemaker included. Whatever had a chance to run either Lou and Dunlin for $4,000 claimed Dunlin for Madden took the Fair Play colt. Salmon Trout, Luminal. Some more race coin.

HAVERHILL HIGH BEATS LAWRENCE

Lawrence, June 18.—Lawrence High lost the second game of the season when Haverhill tied the series between the two schools here, 12 to 7.

Harold Somerville, Lawrence's pitching ace, was found for 14 hits by the Haverhill batters after he had held them scoreless in the first game of the series. Somerville has won 11 games out of 13 that he has pitched this season. The two games lost this season are the first two in two seasons for him.

Stanley Staciak Is Training at Medford

Stanley Staciak, mighty son of Poland, is training at Combination Park, Medford, for his proposed mat bout with George Calza, Italian champion, which the Old Howard management plans to stage at the Boston Arena on Friday evening, June 29.

Staciak, the conquering wrestler in the world tobacco, he will succeed where Stanislaus Zbyszko and Waldek Zbyszko failed. Like Calza, Staciak is an unbeaten and he is confident his record will still be clear after the tussle at the Arena.

The Old Howard management believes it will have the two wrestlers signed in a day or so.

FIRST AID

If you have been invited to a beach party and do not know how to swim, there is no need to worry because it is no longer stylish to go in the water. All that you will have to take with you is a handsome bathing suit and a brightly-colored sweater.

However, if you are not carrying a life insurance policy, it may be advisable to master a few strokes. The best place to learn is in a bathtub because you will not have to wear a suit and can avoid drowning by simply pulling the plug and allowing the water to escape.

The breast stroke is the most popular way of swimming. This is done by putting your arm around the girl's waist.

If a shark attacks you while in the water, you should imitate a sword-fish, because sharks are known to be afraid of these creatures. If this fails to work, the only thing to do is to bare your teeth and growl in the manner of a dog-fish pursuing a school of catfish.

Medbury Says—

By John P. Medbury

THE latest fad among people today seems to be having their teeth pulled out. A man may have an 1887 mouth, but he wants a 1923 set of teeth in it.

SOME people pay so much for a set of gold molars that they have to lock them in the safe when they go to bed.

ONE guy was going around toothless. He told everybody that his teeth were in storage.

HE put them in hock and now every time he wants to chew anything he has to go down to the pawn shop and eat it.

THIS guy who advanced him the money on them isn't going to let the teeth get out of his sight.

EVERYBODY is putting their money into dental work. It's nothing to see a dollar and a half face with a two hundred dollar set of teeth in it.

ONE guy had such a large mouth that he had to get the man who built the Panama Canal to make his bridge work.

HE had a diamond put on the end of every tooth and now he goes around biting holes in windows.

ANOTHER bird had so much gold in his mouth that it looked like he had gone to California in 1849 and bitten into a mine.

SOME false teeth are very satisfactory. A New York dentist makes a set for a hundred dollars which are guaranteed to do three beefsteaks an hour.

OF course the more soup you eat, the more mileage you'll get out of your teeth.

BUT if anything goes wrong with them, every dental office is a service station.

NATURALLY, you've got to be careful what you eat. A Chicago guy stripped four teeth on one of his wife's biscuits.

IT'S getting so that we've got to take out accident insurance on our bridgework.

WHEN people smile nowadays, you don't know whether they're happy or just showing off their new teeth.

ONE guy was so ashamed of having the same set of teeth he was born with that he kept his mouth closed all the time.

THEN, when he bought a brand new gold set, he got married and now he won't ever be able to open his mouth.

BUT the average person doesn't use any judgment. They will pay $500 for a set of false teeth and then they haven't got any money left to buy food to use them on.

YOU MUST FIRST SELL YOURSELF TO YOURSELF TO ADVANCE

Your employers do not trust you as you wish they would.

You wonder why you do not inspire confidence.

Are you confident of yourself? If you were advanced to the job ahead, would you be capable of filling it without a certain period of extra preparation?

Would you accept another position higher in line personally assured that you could fill it?

The facts are against you, and yet you wonder why others are not impressed with your ability.

Have more faith in yourself, based upon solid facts.

You probably have not demonstrated to your boss that you are built for bigger things and higher duties.

It is the way you discharge your present responsibilities that convinces your boss for or against you in a higher place.

Sell yourself to yourself before you sell to others.

When you are fitted for something better then you have and have convinced yourself, you will probably get it.

HEROES

Whoever it was that told your wife about the party you were on last Saturday night.

The kid who threw the brick at the plate glass window in the drug store.

The lady who started the scandal about the three old gentlemen who were seen hanging around the stage entrance to a burlesque show.

The chap who made away with your new overcoat in the restaurant.

The party who turned in a false fire alarm at 2 o'clock in the morning.

Rally in New York Extends Over a Broad List of Issues After Bad Start

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

Here's a confession from one of Wall Street's "best insiders" a very prominent executive of one of America's largest financial institutions, as the much-discussed "rake-offs" pocketed by bankers, from underwritings, financial syndicates and other such activities.

"You once sent me a letter and received from one of your readers," he said, "who asked you to explain how I had been able to make so much money since I came to Wall Street. I'm going to tell you very frankly my money-making experiences in Wall Street—and out of Wall Street.

* * *

"It is true that I am one of what the public call the 'insiders.' It is true that I have participated in a good many 'inside' syndicates and the other operations which the public imagine always net millions of dollars for the 'insiders.' It is true that I have sometimes made big profits on such deals.

"But you know very well that once you get into that kind of game, you can't just lap up the cream and refuse to take your share of the skimmed milk. If you join a group or groups handling these syndicates, these organizations, these underwritings, and so forth, you must go along with the poor ones as well as the choice ones. Often jobs have to be undertaken which you, in the interest of the general situation, know darn well stand far more chance of costing you money than of making you money. You must either play ball every time your team takes the field or get off the lot.

* * *

"I'm telling you the honest truth when I tell you that, taking all these 'insider' propositions together, I haven't made a single dollar from them.

"The fact is that I'm behind rather than ahead of the game."

* * *

I expressed astonishment.

* * *

"Yes, you may find it difficult to believe this, and I seriously doubt if you or I can get the public to believe it. But the truth is exactly as I have told you."

* * *

I ventured to remark that, in view of this, he seemed to have prospered tolerably well. Here is his illuminating, thought-compelling reply:

"Yes, I have made a good living—but from money I have actually earned. The only money I have today is money that cost me a lot of sweat. When I was quite a young man I joined two partners in an enterprise in Illinois. It lost money and blew up. I then discovered that, under the law, I was solely responsible for the debts, as the two other partners were both broke and I was single. The amount of the debts staggered me. I consulted an old friend, now really a judge, and he laid down the law as to what I must do. 'The son of ——— mentioning my father's name, must not come into court world by wriggling out of debts he has legally incurred,' he told me. 'You must accept responsibility for every dollar owed. We'll get the creditors together, explain the situation fully to them, and then you will pledge yourself to pay off every cent as rapidly as you can earn the money.'

* * *

"It took me several years to discharge all those obligations. I worked like a slave—and lived like a slave.

"Then, shortly afterwards, I saw an opportunity for other business for myself, in the same line. I had hardly any capital, as all my savings had gone to pay off the old debts, but there wasn't a concern that wasn't willing and ready to advance me all the capital I needed. Well, I set up in business, made a success of it, and I still own this business. It nets me a very fair profit every year.

* * *

"Next I started another business, alone, somewhat collateral line. I put in years of the hardest kind of work building it up. I suppose it was because of what I accomplished that I received a call from the bank I have been with ever since. When I came to Wall Street I was very well fixed.

A Far Reaching Influence

RAILROAD DIVIDEND ERA — A few days ago New York Central increased its dividend to a 7% annual basis.

Newspapers have since published editorial comment to that this action will usher in a period of better times for the railroads. We believe it means a railroad dividend era.

Analyses of the railroad situation show that the roads have at last developed earning power, first, by reason of increased tonnage secured, by cutting expenses to the bone, and, third, by being assured of "reasonable rates."

Space is inadequate here to treat the railroad situation in detail. We have analyzed the problem in a lengthy article in this week's Market Letter. It is worth reading.

RAIL LEADERS GAIN POINT OR MORE

After a bad start the New York stock market today enlisted a rally that extended over a broad list of issues.

The rail leaders, Atchison, Baltimore & Ohio, Pere Marquette and New York Central, all gained a point or better. Money renewed at 3 per cent.

New 1923 lows were made in early trading by Consolidated Textile, American Sugar, Anaconda, Baldwin Locomotive, Columbia Gas, General Asphalt, Goodrich, Gulf States Steel, Central Leather, Kennecott, Lee Tire, Hudson, Pan-American "A" and "B," Producers & Refiners, Sinclair, Texas Company and U. S. Industrial Alcohol. Losses ran around a point or more.

Du Pont was off nearly 4 points, Houston Oil nagged 3 points.

Crucible Steel, despite its resumption of dividends, yielded 2, apparently being sold on the idea that the "good news was out." Later Crucible rallied more than a point.

Weakness in cotton and sugar futures, as well as a falling stock market, again emphasize the reactionary tendency which has developed in many directions since the middle of March. Although business continues in large volume, it has unquestionably lost some of its "edge," particularly with respect to future commitments.

The present, however, is sort of a between seasons period. The crops are not made, and there is no very clear indication yet as to just how fall trade is going to shape up. To the slump in cotton futures improvement in growing conditions of the new crop, as well as increasing curtailment on the part of spinners, have contributed.

Wall St. Gossip

RESUMPTION of dividends on American Smelting & Refining common at 3% rate improves investment status of the company's bonds.

IT IS estimated that Mack Trucks, Inc., will publish net for six months of approximately $12 on the common shares.

BREAK in cotton has driven textile buyers, at least temporarily, out of the market.

OFFERING of 160,000 shares of new common of Burns Brothers authorized by stockholders is expected to be made before close of week.

MANY motor companies today have more cash than at any previous time in their history.

IT IS said there is no chance of dividends being resumed on Cuba Cane preferred this year.

E. L. DOHENY denies interest in California Petroleum.

SUGARS looked as if the public was disinclined to buy freely at present prices. Companies with large part of season's crop unsold slumped the most.

WHITE EAGLE Oil, by purchase of Community Oil's bulk station properties, becomes second largest distributor in South Dakota.

ON JUNE 12 there were 51,159 cars on the New Haven and the Central New England. Two months previous, or on April 13, there were 57,881.

SHELVES of country are bare of textiles and an improvement in demand once it gets under way is liable to gain momentum rapidly.

CURBS social producers have in the main lower lines and feel optimistic that prices must soon begin higher. After so swift a reaction probabilities would seem to favor partial recovery.

$35 a Name Cost of Curb Brokerage Customers' List

Partner in one of the big New York brokerage houses now in the hands of receivers made the statement to a friend that it cost $35 a name to get a customer on the list. This estimate, of course, approximate, allowed for advertising, operating expenses, etc.

Thus the early closing out of an account might mean this would be a dead loss to the firm.

Buying and selling commissions on a comparatively small number of shares, though these charges are moderate, would wipe out the "name charge" and start the brokerage house in legitimate profits.

Coupon Bonds in denominations of $1,000, $500 and $100, registerable as to principal only, interest payable May 15th, and November 15th, redeemable as a whole or in part at the option of the Company on any interest paying date upon thirty days' notice after five years at 110. TAX REFUND: The Company will agree to pay interest without deduction for normal Federal Income Taxes up to but not exceeding 2%. The Company will also agree, upon application within sixty days after payment, to refund the Pennsylvania State Tax of four mills on bonds held by residents of Pennsylvania, the State Tax in Connecticut up to the rate of four mills annually, the Maryland Security Tax not exceeding the rate of four and one-half mills per annum and the Massachusetts Income Tax not exceeding 6% per annum on income from the bonds.

For particulars we refer to the letter of Mr. George T. Wilson, President of the Company, which is summarized as follows:

THE COMPANY AND BUSINESS: The Eureka Smelting Company was organized to control the transportation and smelting business of the famous Eureka District of Nevada, and tributary territory.

It has purchased the Eureka-Nevada railroad, 88.6 miles in length, connecting with the Southern Pacific and Western Pacific lines at Palisade, Nevada.

It will construct and operate on a custom basis a smelter for the treatment of the ores of the mining districts centering about Eureka, Nevada. It has purchased extensive and valuable mining properties to safeguard the enterprise and increase its earnings.

An important feature of the business will be the recovery of arsenic which the ores of the Eureka District contain in profitable quantities.

The Company will operate under non-competitive conditions.

PURPOSE OF BOND ISSUE: To build the first 500-ton unit of the smelter, finish paying for the railroad and provide additional equipment to handle the large increase of business the activities of the Company will create.

SECURITY FOR BONDS: The bonds will be secured by first mortgage on all the property now owned and which may hereafter be acquired, including the telephone line ninety miles in length connecting Eureka and Palisade, Nevada, and by deposit with the trustee of the entire capital stock of the railroad Company, which has no debts.

EARNINGS: During the time required to complete the smelter, which is approximated at one year, the net earnings of the railroad, less betterments planned, are estimated at $320,800, which is pledged for the payment of interest on the bonds. It is estimated that upon completion of the smelter the net earnings will be 20% to 40% annually on the outstanding stock.

CONVERSION PRIVILEGE: The earning power of the Company makes the conversion privilege an unusually attractive and valuable feature, to which special consideration is invited.

SINKING FUND: For each ton of ore treated by the smelter one dollar will be placed in a sinking fund with the trustee which shall be used for buying bonds in the open market at 103 or under and for the retirement of bonds after five years at 110.

THOSE GERMAN MARKS

To O. R. O., Watertown. — Colgate of the New York Stock Exchange house of Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne, generally called "K., N. & K." because of the difficulty of pronouncing the name, emphasizes the advice we have offered readers from beginning of the craze—that is, not to dabble in German marks. The "K., N. & K." failure is laid in part to the decline of the paper mark. The Russian and Austrian currency are not considered any more. Many people would speculate less and invest more, when they are in moderate circumstances, they would just as much increase their chances of attaining financial independence.

UNITED SHOE

To I. T. C., Maywood St.—Through process of enhancement of subsidiary company stocks and bonds and leased machinery to the extent of nearly $11,000,000, bringing total value of this item to $55,758,000, United Shoe Machinery directors were able to report profit and loss surplus as of February 28, 1923, of $26,649,000, equal to over $4 per cent. of common stock outstanding, at close of fiscal year and largest profit and loss surplus corporation ever reported.

This is more than double total of $14,819,050 at close of fiscal year previous, to seven years' average for 1922, value of securities owned and leased machinery has jumped $35,672,000 to present total of $91,981,000.

Through 62 per cent. stock dividend profit and loss surplus was decreased to $18,871,000 and common stock increased from $13,859,950 to $38,211. This process, therefore, made surplus equal to about 89 per cent. of the common outstanding, as against 94 per cent. before payment of stock dividend. At close of 1922 fiscal period ratio of surplus to common stock was 79 per cent.

By showing earnings for 1923 year of $3.18 a share corporation for first time since 1920 showed common dividends earned. The aggregate deficit after dividends in the two preceding years totaled over $3,666,000. These were the only definite company ever reported after dividends, and never showed a deficit before dividends.

Figuring increase in profit and loss surplus for the twelve months, which was brought about by marking up subsidiary securities and leased machinery assets, accumulated over a period of years, United Shoe actually reported earnings on the common stock last year of $8.20 a share and, the enhanced value equaled $6.29 and $2 a share was paid in dividends.

The increase in the common stock by the 40 per cent. stock dividend brought the total value of common shares outstanding to 1,941,528 and to pay the regular dividend of $2 will require $3,883,056. This will be $1,110,348 more than necessary heretofore.

KANSAS CITY SOUTHERN

F. S., Magnolia St. — Kansas City Southern has done nothing remarkable in the way of earnings during the first five months.

Based on showing made by Kansas City Southern, including Texarkana & Ft. Smith, during four months ended with April, road should close the year with a balance equivalent to approximately 6 per cent. a share on the common stock. 1921 would compare with 8.49 per cent. a share earned in 1922, and 5.32 per cent. in 1921.

April earnings statement showed up fairly well, disclosing a $88,128 increase in net after taxes, equipment and joint facility rents, and bringing the four months' gain to $427,475, or 43 per cent. of the $988,347 increase in gross during that period.

The $427,475 gain in net for the four months was sufficient to cover preferred dividends for six months, or was equal to better than $1.40 a share on the $29,959,000 of outstanding common stock.

In face of the $988,000 gain in gross for the four months, operating expenses gained $610,655, approximately 62 per cent. of the increase in revenues being consumed by higher expenses. The ratio of expenses to revenues was more favorable than in 1922, standing at 72.96 per cent., against 74.70 per cent. during the first four months of last year. The April operating ratio was 74.60 per cent., a reduction of a full point from corresponding month of 1922.

These bonds are to be convertible at any time into the capital stock of the Eureka Smelting Company in like amounts at par for par.

The purpose of the bond issue is to build the first 500 ton unit of the smelter, finish paying for the railroad and provide additional equipment to handle the large increase of business the activities of the company aim at.

The bonds will be secured by first mortgage on all the property now owned and which may hereafter be acquired, including the telephone line ninety miles in length connecting Eureka and Palisade, Nevada and by deposit with the trustee of the entire capital stock of the railroad company, which has no debt.

For each ton of ore treated by the smelter one dollar will be placed in a sinking fund with the trustees which shall be used for buying bonds in the open market at 103 or under and for the retirement of bonds after five years at 110.

MYSTERY IN RETURN OF STOLEN BONDS

Lawrence, June 19.—Mystery surrounds the receiving of an envelope by Joseph Lynch, agent and treasurer of the George E. Kundhardt Corporation, postmarked New Mexico, and dated June 3, containing $2,100 of Liberty Loan Bonds which were alleged to have been stolen from the safe in the mill office, one night the week end of June 1.

A warrant is now out for the arrest of Owen Gillogley of No. 84 Myrtle street, 33 years old.

State and City Debt

Nothing to Be Alarmed at, Nor, on the Other Hand, an Excuse for Extravagance

Our genial State Tax Commissioner, Henry F. Long, now and then points with alarm to the fact that our State and municipal indebtedness now foots up to rising three hundred millions, or approximately seventy-six dollars apiece for every man, woman and child in the State. He draws the obvious moral that it behooves the taxpayers to scrutinize with care both the State appropriations and the local budgets with a view to cutting out waste and insuring full value for every dollar spent or pledged for public uses.

This is good advice, but lest it should tempt to a penny-wise pound-foolish policy in paring down appropriations it would be well to give more consideration than Commissioner Long appears to have given to the credit side of the account. It appears from the books of the State Auditor, for instance, that over against the $138,000,000 debt of the State must be set about $54,000,000 in sinking funds; that more than half of the eighty-four millions remaining have simply been advanced to the Metropolitan Water Board and other public utilities, and will be repaid by users of the service without any recourse to the taxpayers at all; and that over against the forty millions remaining, which is the real net debt from the taxpayers' standpoint, must be reckoned publicly-owned real estate to the value of over $72,000,000.

Analysis of our municipal indebtedness is more difficult, since neither cities nor towns yet keep their accounts in such a way as to enable the objects for which particular debts were incurred to be readily ascertained. It does appear, however, that considerably more than a quarter of the total municipal indebtedness of some $200,000,000 has been incurred for public utilities which are self-supporting; that the balance to be ultimately met by taxation is nearly or quite as completely offset by tangible public property as in the case of the State debt; and that the city debts average only about 4 per cent., and the town debts only about 1½ per cent. of the assessed valuations, which are admittedly under rather than over the actual value of the property which is responsible for the payment of the debts.

This is not a showing that should tempt to extravagance, but neither does it afford much ammunition for stingy taxpayers who would willingly cripple our schools and charitable institutions to save themselves a dollar here and there, nor for dishonest exploiters of public utilities who wish to scare taxpayers from securing the real economies of public management.

Our Fire Losses

And Lights in the Sky

Copyright, 1923, Star Company

Fire losses in the United States amount to over five hundred million dollars a year. Three-quarters of the amount could be saved by reasonable care. Half could be saved by common sense legislation.

You are told that lights of five hundred million candle-power will be located at intervals from coast to coast to guide fliers. They will be on towers twenty feet above the ground, pointing upward and rotating like the beams of lighthouses.

Couldn't they be attached to "captive" balloons, a thousand feet or more up in the air, above fogs and mists? A wire to the light could run up the cable holding the balloon.

If We All Saved—

On What Should We Live?

Copyright, 1923, Star Company

An ingenious financial advertisement shows that by investing $762 for fifteen years at 6 per cent. and reinvesting a man at the end of fifteen years would have a yearly income of $1,140 and an accumulated fortune of $19,000. Hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions, of Americans would be glad to have after fifteen years of reasonable saving an annual income of $1,140 for themselves and their children forever, and that actually COULD invest $762 every year.

For each individual it would be fortunate if the thing were done. But what would happen to the nation if millions did it?

When you have an annual income and "live on that income," you are not really living on YOUR income. You are living on those that HAVEN'T saved, that HAVEN'T an income and MUST WORK for those that have money.

If everybody in the United States had an income of $500,000 a year, five hundred thousand dollars wouldn't mean independence.

For our system of civilization it is just as well that the average man doesn't save. That keeps us working.

Fight Over College Heads

And now Amherst College joins Clark University in hot-water over the question of the dismissal or retention of its president.

In Amherst's case, however, it is the trustees who are dissatisfied with President Meiklejohn for being too progressive, and students and the faculty are enthusiastically supporting him for the same reason, while the Clark trustees are fully satisfied with a president of an ultra-conservative type that neither students nor faculty can stomach.

From an educational standpoint the faculty and students appear to be in the right in both instances; but when it comes to a question of money-getting for college uses a good deal might be said in defence of the trustees' standard of qualifications for the president's office, it must be sadly admitted.

INVASION OF GIANT ANTS

MERRILL, Wis., June 19.—Fish in the lakes and streams near this city recently enjoyed a day of real feasting when Merrill was "invaded" by an army of giant ants. After residents of the city, aided by hundreds of chickens, ducks and geese, all of the latter enjoying greatly the "invasion," had for two days battled the unwelcome visitors, millions remained.

The ants were of the flying variety and were of a brownish hue. They were about three-quarters of an inch in length. Close observers said they arrived in the city with a trainload of pulpwood received from Canada.

Railroad Clerk's Pay

Editor Boston American:

After reading letter sent you by the ex-postoffice clerk, I wish that someone would look into the railroad clerks' pay. Secretary Mellon states that $2,000 per year was the least that an American family could live on, yet the maximum pay for railroad clerk with from ten to thirty years' experience is $1,600 to $1,800.

Recently we asked the Railroad Labor Board for an increase, but they refused us saying that we received a high enough salary.

How do they expect a man with a family to provide decent food and shelter with the high cost of living on such low salaries? I think the Labor Board should investigate and grant us an increase without any further delay so as to stop some of the suffering before it is too late.

Law Enforcement

Editor Boston American:

Two recent editorials appearing in your Boston American, one under the date of June 9—"Women Can Enforce the Prohibition Law" and on the 12th—"Women and U. S. District Attorney Harris," have just come to my notice, and in view of a resolution, supporting the Eighteenth Amendment, passed by our Grand Commandery in annual session this week, in the city of Somerville, we desire to commend the American for its attitude upon this law enforcement question.

Received Gifts

Editor Helping Hand:

We received the articles for a baby from Mrs. C. S. of Dover. They were a godsend to us. It is certainly a fine service you are performing, and we both thank you sincerely.

MR. AND MRS. C.

Not us, but Mrs. C. S.

Donates $5.00

Editor Helping Hand:

I thank you very much for sending me Mrs. Y.'s address, as she sent me just what I needed. In return I am sending you five dollars to do as you like with. I was saving it up to try and buy a dress with, but I think it is a shame to pay so much with so many in need. If you get a chance to get some size 3 shoes or slippers, I will send more money, as it would cost so much to buy them. I would be so glad to help do my part as much as I can. MRS. E. M. T.

Many thanks indeed for the $5. It has been added to the Helping Hand fund and will do a great deal of good somewhere.

To Help C. H.

Editor Helping Hand:

I have shipped Mrs. F. of Maine a nice box of useful articles. Will you please put me in touch with that sad case who signs herself C. H.? MRS. R. F.

Many thanks for all you are doing. C. H.'s address has been sent you.

Things for T. K.

Editor Helping Hand:

I have some things for T. K. Please send me her address. I also have a pair of black shoes, size 4½, almost new.

MRS. M. L. B.

Thank you. You have been sent T. K.'s address. The shoes will be held for replies.

Need Clothes and Shoes

Editor Helping Hand:

I am writing to ask you if you have any offers of men's clothes or shoes. We have a large family and are just living from hand to mouth. My husband is really in need of clothes. I feel so bad for him, as he is not very strong and is trying hard to do all he can. His feet are near bare, and as he needs shoes for all of us, he would be glad to get some to mend for himself. He wears a 6½ shoe and a 36 or 38 suit.

MRS. M. F. C.

For Motherless Girl

Editor Helping Hand:

Please send me the address of B. K. and also of Mrs. R. B. 2, as I have some things for the motherless girl she is interested in. All my life, or ever since I was old enough to know that there were others poorer than I (which was pretty poor), I have wanted to help someone, but my chances were very few. I envy the ones who have money and lots of nice things to give, but am so glad to be able to do something, be it ever so little. No need to publish this or thank me.

MRS. G. S.

We have both published this and thanked you, however, because your letter expresses so well the spirit of helpfulness that such a large number of readers have so quietly displayed. The address of B. K. and of Mrs. K. B. 2 have been sent you.

Grateful for Clothes

Editor Helping Hand:

I am thanking you for the help you gave to me. I received the clothes that G. G. C. sent me. They were very greatly needed, and we are all very grateful indeed. I hope the good work will go on. I. M.

Able to Walk Little

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a widow with a girl fifteen, who is too young to help much. I have been in the hospital most of the time, and am only able to walk a little with the aid of crutches. If you know of someone who has some bed linen and some clothes for myself, size 40, I would appreciate it so much. MRS. A. C. 2.

Needs Thin Dress

Editor Helping Hand:

Through your kindly putting me in touch with Mrs. C. M. A. I have received from her many very useful garments, and she has been so beautifully kind about it. Mrs. E. F. was also very good to me. May I ask for one more thing that neither sent? I need a thin dress of some kind, no matter if it is faded. Because of my spinal trouble I have to wear a wrap when I go out, and to wear heavy dresses underneath I find it unbearably hot. M. C.

Will the woman whose initials are Mrs. J. W., and who asked for the address of Miss D. H., please send her address? We could find none on her letter.

Other Offers

The editor wishes to express his sincere thanks to the following people for their generous offers of assistance to those in need. They have been sent the addresses they request.

FIRST WONDER OF THE INDUSTRIAL WORLD

By HERBERT KAUFMAN

THE first wonder of the manufacturing world was born in an industrial manger.

Twenty years ago Henry Ford just managed to scrape, scrimp and borrow $27,000. Achievement doesn't quibble at the size of its cradles. Great purposes beg only root-hold.

With such trumpery capital, hardly sufficient nowadays to stock a haberdashery, a delicatessen shop or a social leader's wardrobe, behold how an unread, self-trained mechanic, totally inexperienced in production, finance or marketing, erected and equipped a plant, turned out and sold 1,708 automobiles within a year, and started a business whose annual output has reached 1,500,000 motor vehicles, yielding gross revenues beyond $50,000,000 a month.

From a Day Wage to a Billion

Please remember that total Federal receipts from all sources were considerably less when Cleveland came to the White House. Then reflect upon the opportunities of a country which permitted Ford, working for day wages, at midlife to command more money than was expended upon the Louisiana purchase, the acquisition of Alaska, all our island possessions and the construction of several transcontinental transportation lines.

His Detroit factory covers three hundred acres—steel mills and foundries four times the space of the Detroit factory.

He owns miles of coal mines, mountain ranges of timber, counts among his assets saw and cement mills, railroads, glass, paint, electrical and upholstery plants, waterpower stations and ore deposits, and he owes no bank a dollar.

Hated, Admired, Narrow and Square

The man is bigoted, eccentric and uninformed, socially and racially intolerant, but his success is without an economic stain, unmarked by an injustice, legally and morally clean. He has boldly and bravely served his chance, squarely delivered the goods to employe and consumer. There isn't a stoop at his conquest, a competitive wrong in his trail.

Hate or admire him as you please, but at least respect his code and accomplishment.

Time, travel and contact will inevitably liberalize his views and temper his prejudices.

We all grow as we go.

Many a chapter is yet to be written before conclusive judgment may be passed upon the miracle man of Detroit.

Snatched From the Cradle

Other folk have miracle men, too, but their talent inclines toward adaptation.

Europe snatches Yankee notions from neglected cradles and adopts them. We invent, they perfect.

Wright's priority in aviation was a wasted adventure. Lake and Holland tried to give us exclusive rights to their diving rowboats.

If Congress weren't a collection of fatuous fools the United States could have been the first power in the air, on the waters and below them.

Great Britain, betrayed by progress, hastens to protect her exposed islands, breaks naval limitation agreements and launches the first unit of a depth battleship fleet beside which schools of whales will look like sprats.

These monster vessels keep pace with the fastest surface cruisers, can hold mined harbors in contempt, may stand fifteen miles out at sea and shatter any coastal city with their twelve-inch guns. Von Tirpitz sent a boy to do a man's work.

A Wireless Station for Santa Claus

A Carnegie expedition is bound for the Arctic to stick antennae on the North Pole.

Tomorrow's youngsters won't drop Santa Claus letters in the mail box. They'll send their Christmas wishes by wireless.

Extras swept the earth as Peary reached his goal, and half of us won't bother to read that Marconi has linked land's end to your receiver.

The inhabitants of a Mexican mining town suddenly learn that they have been living in silver houses and walking on silver streets.

Improved practice discovers a million dollars' worth of ore unextracted by Nineteenth Century smelters. None of our throwaways are hopeless refuse. Garbage and chimney smoke, slag and clay, conceal enough wealth to pay international budgets and defray the charities of the universe.

Pandora's Exhaustless Chest

Soapmakers formerly washed glycerine away with their tankage. Coal tar, pandora of byproducts, hadn't revealed a single precious secret when Watts was wondering if steam might be set to work.

Lumber companies wring anguished hands as they figure the tons of artificial silk and cellulous unknowingly shovelled into blind furnaces. They couldn't see the dividends under sawdust piles any more than pioneer packers sensed fabulous riches slipping through their unwary hands into the fertilizer pits.

If colleges could bring more students to appreciate the importance and profit of exact sciences dollars and sense would have less complaint against the quality of Minerva's later crops.

Universities won't stand on defensive when their courses mainly are practical and objective. One student with his eyes on wastepiles is worth a hundred pedantic prigs searching the musty tomes of yesterday.

Lead will yet be gold. Ancient alchemy is amazingly vindicated by modern chemistry. The past wasn't such a fool as its abracadabras and peaked cape suggest.

The famous spring at Hollywell, Wales, long reputed to effect miraculous cures, is again in the news. Analysis has thus far failed to detect any peculiarly medicinal qualities in the water.

Radio activity may prove the solution.

Omnipotence is surely to be credited with powers greater than human prowess, which daily stages another exhibition of wizardry.

Carrel, most practical of physicists, does not discount the miracles at Lourdes. Pathology finds no reasonable explanation for the amazing and verified tales that seep from that mystic grotto.
